

Parents' group wants teachers trained as 'non-sexists'

Judy Brady-Keller

by JILL BETTNER
A School Dist. 21 parent group has asked the school board to provide teacher training aimed at eliminating sexual bias in the classroom.

The Citizens Task Force on Education, headed by Judy Brady-Keller and Carol Wrabl of Arlington Heights, last week requested the board to set up the training and offered to assist in conducting workshops or other sessions. The task force is a self-appointed group and was not organized by the school board.

In addition to the teacher training, the group also has proposed the creation of a bookmobile to circulate non-sexist materials around Dist. 21 schools enabling teachers to supplement textbooks already in use.

The group conducted a survey of educational materials used in Dist. 21 about two months ago and concluded that many contain and/or stereotyped sex roles.

Following the survey, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of the objectionable materials. In response, the board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well. The proposals for teacher training and a bookmobile are two of the parent group's ideas for implementing the board policy.

A PROPOSED OUTLINE for the teacher training program drawn up by the task force lists the objectives of the training as:

- To enable participants to gain an awareness of the manifestations of sex stereotyping in education and its implications for the future.

- To offer methods whereby school personnel can develop their own strategies for eliminating sex discrimination in the classroom.

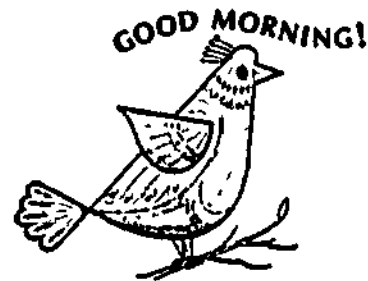

- To provide followup consultation as necessary.

Through various methods such as lectures, small group activities, discussions and audiovisual aids, the task force suggests covering such topics as elementary school textbooks and other educational materials, career counseling, physical education, sex education and family life, teacher expectations and extracurricular activities.

THE GROUP ALSO proposed discussing "methodology for incorporating an awareness of human rights into the curriculum and development of action (Continued on page 5)

Scanlon, Hein, Koeppen to follow Hamer's recommendation?

Bieber dismissal hearings in hands of village attorney

by LYNN ASINOF

Public hearings into the dismissal of Wheeling Building Director William Bieber apparently rest in the hands of the village attorney tonight.

Two village trustees, William Hein and John Koeppen, along with Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon, said Friday that if attorney Paul Hamer says a hearing is legal they may join three other trustees in calling for such action.

Last Thursday, three trustees said they support a call for public hearings in light of the fact that Bieber admitted receiving a gift worth more than $500 from a major local developer.

Trustee Don Jackson plans to call for the public hearings at tonight's village board meeting, saying he thinks acceptance of the gift is grounds for dismissal. Two other trustees, Ron Bruhn and Al Lang, said they would support the call for public hearings so all facts in the matter could be publicly aired.

IN ORDER TO GAIN board approval for the hearings, Jackson's call must be endorsed by at least one more board member.

Of the remaining four board members, Scanlon said he would favor public hearings on dismissal "if counsel (Hamer) advises us so." Koeppen said he was awaiting a phone call to learn the results of a conference with Village Mgr. George Passolt and Hamer, adding that he would then decide whether to follow the attorney's advice.

Hein said the matter is complicated by the fact that Bieber is under indictment, and said he would determine his actions by tonight after having sought legal advice.

Trustee Ed Berger was unavailable for comment.

THE HERALD disclosed Thursday that Bieber admitted on a state-required ethics form that he received the gift valued at more than $500 from the Pekin Corp.,

Bieber medical report today?

The U.S. District Court is expected to receive a medical report on the condition of Wheeling Building Director William Bieber today to determine when four cases against him will be able to be resolved.

Bieber is hospitalized at Lutheran General Hospital where he is being treated for a back ailment. Members of the U.S. Attorney's Office said they expect Bieber to plead guilty on charges against him as soon as he is released from the hospital. It is unknown, however, when Bieber will be released.

The building director was indicted Jan. 31 with five other former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials following a year-long federal grand jury probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. He faces charges of extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, perjury and filing a false income tax statement in four separate cases.

BIEBER'S ATTORNEY, Dave Schippers, said that in addition to the medical report, he expects to ask that the cases against his client be consolidated and transferred to U.S. District Judge Abraham Lincoln Marovitz.

This is apparently the first step in negotiations between Bieber's attorney and the U.S. Attorney's Office. Government prosecutors indicated at the last court hearing that the cases would be moved to Judge Marovitz's court, where Bieber will plead guilty.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Howard Stone said Friday that there can be no resolution of the Bieber cases until the building director is able to appear in court. He said the court will continue the matter until Bieber is released from the hospital.

developers of Tahoe Village. The building director said the gift was a trip to Florida.

Bieber is charged with extorting the January, 1973, trip with former Democratic committeeman James Stavros from the Pekin Corp. in a 14-count federal grand jury indictment issued Jan. 31. He also faces charges of conspiracy to commit extortion, perjury and filing a false income tax return.

Despite demands from residents, village officials have maintained that they cannot fire Bieber until he either pleads guilty or is convicted. They said they are afraid Bieber might sue the village if he is dismissed before the charges are proven.

Bieber is continuing to draw his $21,500-a-year salary while on leave of absence pending resolution of the charges. He is in Lutheran General Hospital for treatment of a back ailment.

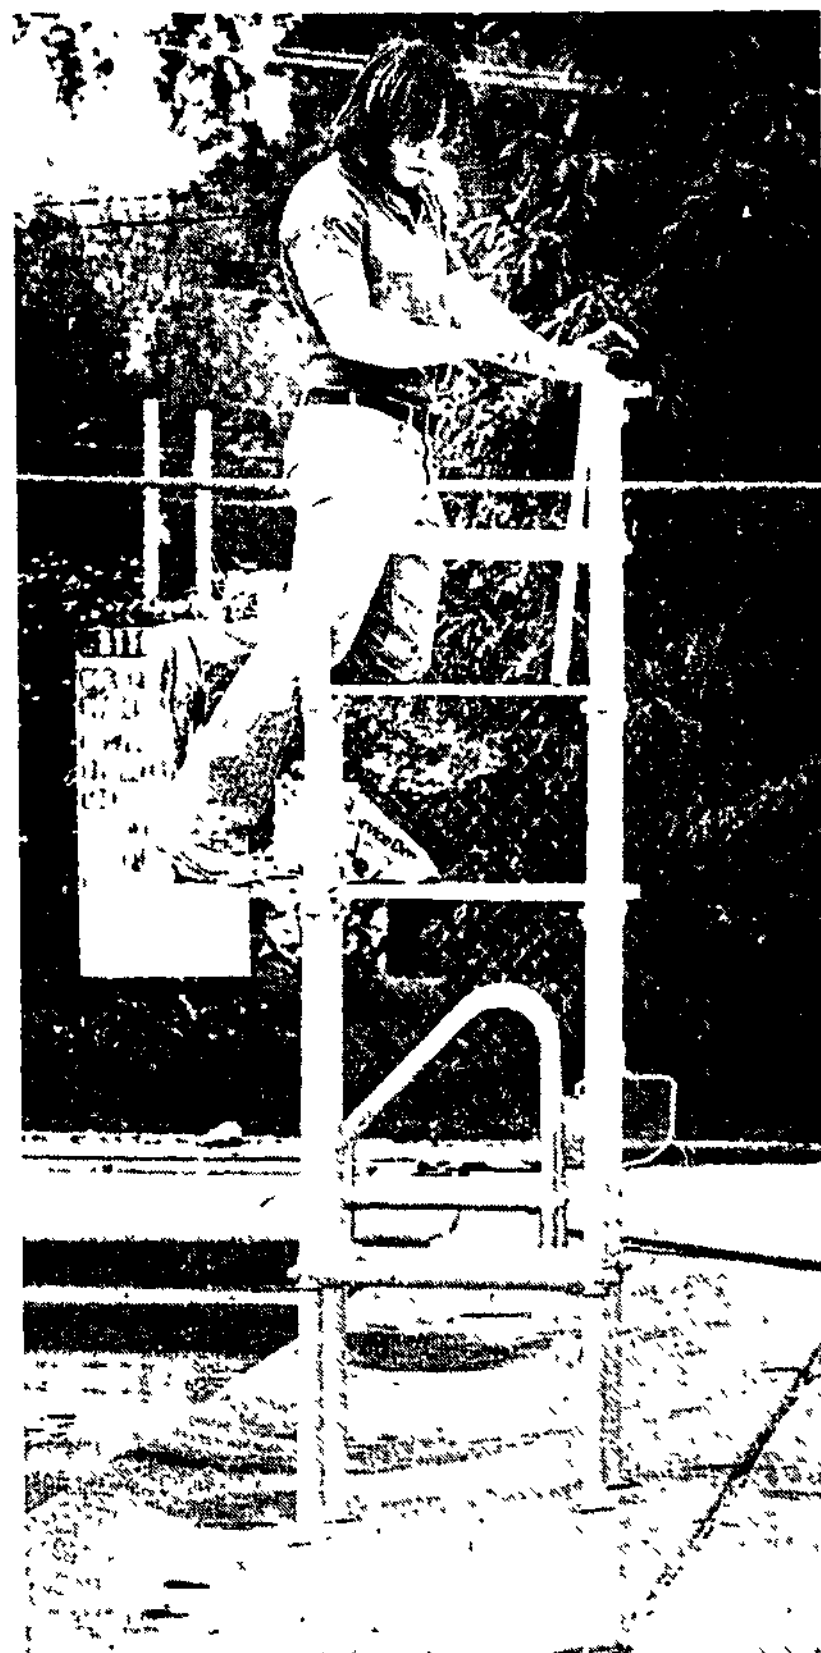

THE ADMISSION that Bieber accepted a gift worth more than $500 from a developer, however, has nothing to do with the fact that he is charged with extorting that gift.

Several of the trustees said that under normal circumstances, the acceptance of such a gift would be grounds for dismissal. They are afraid, however, that their actions might jeopardize the case against Bieber.

When asked if such action would jeopardize the government's case against Bieber, Assistant U.S. Atty. Howard Stone said, "Whatever they do is their business."

Hamer said Friday he had not yet met with Passolt to discuss the possible call for Bieber's dismissal. He said he would wait for the village board to request his opinion before making any statements on the matter.

Passolt has the authority to take action on the Bieber matter independently of the village board, since he is authorized to handle the hiring and firing of all employees. Bieber, however, is under contract, and the terms of that contract can only be terminated by mutual consent or for just cause following a public hearing. Passolt declined Friday to indicate whether he would handle the matter or seek direction from the board. Despite Passolt's decision, the village manager is answerable to the village board. Thus the board could direct Passolt what action to take.

Wheeling High counselor Rizzo dies at 37

The Wheeling High School college counselor, Frank Rizzo, died Thursday in a hospital in Waukegan.

Mr. Rizzo, 37, had been a counselor at Wheeling for two years. He was a resident of Antioch, Ill., and is survived by his wife and four children.

Wheeling principal Thomas Shirley announced the death to the school's faculty and students Friday. He said Mr. Rizzo had been suffering from cancer for nearly a year, and added, "He is to be admired for his strength of character and spirit. In recent months he actually comforted those who came to comfort him."

Shirley added, "Wheeling High School is a better place for having had Mr. Rizzo with us."

Before coming to work at Wheeling, Mr. Rizzo had worked at Mariner Military Academy in North Aurora.

Funeral arrangements had not been announced Friday afternoon.

Village flag taken on Memorial Day

Someone celebrated Memorial Day last Thursday by stealing the Wheeling village flag from in front of the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd. The thieves had lowered the U.S. flag to the ground but did not take it with them.

Police said three youths were seen running from the flagpole area about 11:05 p.m. However, the youths lost their pursuers after they ducked behind the U.S. Post Office across the street.

The flag, which is predominately green with the village's ensigna on it, is valued at $37.50.

Prospect Heights park referendum rates 'yes'

Prospect Heights Park District residents should vote in favor of the $1.1 million referendum Tuesday.

The referendum, which calls for major renovation in the district, fits into the overall plan of the growing community. It is a solid and practical approach to give the people of the Prospect Heights community something they can be proud of in future years.

With the passage of the referendum and the promises park district officials make, the people of this unincorporated area will have something to call their own. This also may give a feeling of belonging to people who are still without a local government.

Residents of the park district should remember that these improvements are for them. They are not only for the children of the district, but for the adults as well.

The addition of handball courts, a gymnasium, art and crafts rooms and meeting rooms will open up a new area of fun and recreation for park district residents.

It also is important that the referendum pass in order that Lions Park Pool be completely renovated as soon as possible. If the referendum fails the state will close the pool after this summer.

The estimated cost of the referendum is low compared with what the same improvements would cost one year from now if the referendum had to be refilled. Residents should not pass by this chance to improve the parks and add important development to the community.

Auto 'fight' leads to speed chase, arrest

A 26-year-old River Grove man was sent to the hospital with scalp wounds after he was attacked by another motorist late Friday morning in Wheeling.

A spokesman for Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said James Rohrlack was treated for the scalp cuts and then released from the hospital. His alleged attacker, Philip Burke, 45, of 7801A Bristol Ln., Hanover Park, was charged by police with aggravated battery, disorderly conduct and attempting to elude police. Wheeling Police Lt. Thomas Conte said Friday he expects more traffic charges to be lodged against Burke.

According to Conte, Burke or Rohrlack were driving in separate autos when one cut off the other about 11:30 a.m. near the U.S. Post Office, 250 W. Dundee Rd. A running conversation of insults and challenges apparently followed with the result that the two men started fighting near the intersection of Wolf and Dundee roads, police said.

Burke allegedly struck Rohrlack twice on the head with a jagged bar of steel during the fight, according to police.

St. Alphonsus board names new officers

The St. Alphonsus school board has elected new officers. They are Brian Halpin, chairman; Diane Kern, vice-chairman; and Paul Gauvreau, secretary.

Other board members include Bob Reynolds, James Deal, Leo Guenther, James Casey and the Rev. E. Hoffman. The school is located at 411 Wheeling Rd., Prospect Heights.

CONTE SAID THREE Wheeling police cars then chased Burke at high speeds for about 12 miles, the chase ending northeast on Deerfield. Conte said Burke made a turn off Ill. Rte. 22 onto a dead-end road which led to his capture.

A passenger in Burke's car, William Harvey, 45, of Falmouth, Mass., was charged with disorderly conduct, aggravated battery and unlawful use of a weapon because he had a loaded .22 cal. semi-automatic pistol with him, Conte said.

Harvey told police he is a Falmouth policeman.

Conte said actually is a reserve officer with that police department.

Conte said Harvey told police he had the gun because he was carrying $1,500 as a partial payment on a gun collection that he was in this area to purchase.

Night racing returns to Arlington Park

by KURT BAER

Night racing will be held at Arlington Park Race Track today.

The return of night racing to the suburban track comes as a result of a dispute between the operators of Sportsman's Park and the Illinois Harness Horsemen's Assn. which has forced the cancellation of tonight's scheduled harness opener at Sportsman's.

Arlington Park received permission over the weekend from the Illinois Racing Board to make up for the closing of Sportsman's with additional evening thoroughbred races. Night races at Arlington Park will begin at 8 p.m. with eight races scheduled. The races will probably end around 11 p.m., according to a spokesman for the track. Persons who come for the day racing may stay through the evening on the same ticket.

Jack Loomer, president of Arlington Park said Sunday night racing will be held at the track tonight and Friday night. No night racing is planned for Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday night.

Arlington Park received permission over the weekend from the Illinois Racing Board to run the extra races, but the board members were reportedly still being polled Sunday about the decision. If the dispute at Sportsman's is settled or if the Racing Board takes a different stand this morning, there is still a chance the night races will not be held today.

Tonight's races will mark the first time since 1969 that horses have run under the lights at Arlington Park.

ONE WEEK OF evening races, from Aug. 29 to Sept. 8, 1969, capped a two-year controversy over the lighting of Arlington Park, involving residents and officials from Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows, the Illinois Racing Board and the former owner of Arlington Park, Marje Everett.

The lights were turned on again Sept. 10, 1971, for the Yamaha Gold Cup motorcycle race, which drew numerous protests from residents in Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows, particularly those living near the race track.

A request for a special use permit to repeat the motorcycle race in 1972 was unanimously denied by the Arlington Heights Village Board, and plans for the race subsequently were dropped.

LAST YEAR, some of the track's lights were used every night during the Future of America Fair, Aug. 24 to Sept. 3. At that time, police reported only a very limited number of complaints from residents.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh said Sunday he assumed "some people will find this objectionable, just as they did in the past." But he said the apparent short-term nature of night racing may influence the position of both residents and village officials.

Walsh said he did not know what legal obligations the race track has to the village with regard to night racing. He said the matter will be researched by the village administration and could be discussed by the village board at its meeting tonight.

"There may actually be some merit, during a short-term, in seeing just what the impact (of night racing) is in terms of traffic, noise and all the other things," Walsh said. "We'd at least have some experience to fall back on if the time comes when they (track officials) propose this full-time."

ROLLING MEADOWS Mayor Roland Meyer said he planned to ask the city attorney today whether the racing board has the power to approve night racing without first holding a public hearing.

If in the city attorney's opinion the board has acted illegally, Meyer said he will ask for an injunction against future night races.

"Most of the time when they hold night racing, or make a change in the racing schedule, they hold public hearings on it first. I'll ask the city attorney to check it out. That's about all we can do," Meyer said.

LIGHTS at Arlington Park Race Track will go on tonight for the first nighttime horse race at the track in five years. A racing double header is planned because of a strike involving Sportsman's Park harness drivers.

Peskin sentenced to 3 yrs. in prison

"The fiver" in the Hoffman Estates bribery scandal which implicated six former officials of that suburb received a three-year sentence to a federal penitentiary Friday. Bernard Peskin, an attorney and former state representative, was sentenced by federal Judge Frank J. McGarr who also scolded the officials of Hoffman Estates and the firm of Kaufman & Broad which participated in the bribery scheme. "It was a black day for the citizens of Hoffman Estates when the corrupt influence of Kaufman and Broad first insinuated itself into village affairs," the judge said.

Teachers to rally tonight

Teachers in High School Dist. 211 will meet tonight en masse in support of their negotiating team which is attempting to get a better settlement from the school board in this year's contract sessions. The teachers will gather in the Fremd High School gymnasium "as a vote of confidence" for their negotiators. The teachers recently rejected a school board offer of a 6.2 per cent raise. The teachers want 10 per cent.

Sexual bias in the classroom? A parent group in the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove School Dist. 21 thinks so and wants the school board to provide teacher training aimed at eliminating sexual bias. Prospect Heights Dist. 23 teachers and the board of education have declared an impasse in bargaining talks for the 1974-75 teacher contracts. The two sides now go through four steps involving meetings with all parties before an outside mediator is brought in to settle the dispute.

Rabid bat at Maryville

At least six Maryville Academy students will begin painful treatment for rabies after being either bitten or scratched by a rabid bat. The bat was found on the Maryville grounds and apparently passed around to several students before being handed over to a school nurse. County rabies control authorities later confirmed the animal was rabid. Initially, some 35 Maryville students were thought to have been infected by the bat.

Automakers to seek air bags delay

U.S. automakers will ask the federal government today to back off on its demand for safety air bags to be installed on all 1977 model cars. General Motors, the nation's biggest automaker will present its arguments for a delay, in testimony which has the backing of the other three members of the "Big Four."

Nixon milk support explanation rebutted

Senate Watergate investigators have rebutted President Nixon's explanation that he raised the price support of raw milk because Congress was holding a "gun to our head" and would have passed a much larger increase. In a staff report detailing a milk producers' pledge of $2 million to Nixon's 1972 campaign, the investigators concluded there was no such threat and that the increase OK'd by Nixon was higher than that proposed on Capitol Hill.

Pentagon issues will occupy Senate

A new dispute over the Navy's F14 "Tomcat" fighter plane and a liberal list of 18 ways to cut the 1975 Pentagon arms budget promise to occupy most of the Senate's attention this week. The $21.8 billion military procurement bill is being rushed to the floor months ahead of its normal schedule because the Senate is struggling to clear the calendar for a possible impeachment trial of President Nixon late this summer.

Authorities cautious in Patty hunt

Threats from the radical underground and a series of bombings are keeping federal and local authorities in Los Angeles cautious and suspicious in their search for Patricia Hearst. The 20-year-old heiress, who has claimed allegiance with the remnants of her Symbionese Liberation Army captors, was believed still in Southern California.

Move under way for new nerve gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First, the victim loses all muscular control over his body and cannot even blink his eyes. Within seconds, his limbs are paralyzed. Within a couple of minutes, he suffocates because he cannot breathe.

He is the victim of a microscopic drop of odorless, tasteless, colorless nerve gas, a terrifying weapon stockpiled by most major world powers and some smaller nations. It has never been used in war.

Now the United States is on the verge of making a major change in nerve gas weaponry. The Defense Department asked Congress for $5.8 million in stand-by funds in the event a final decision is made to begin production.

Meanwhile, Army Secretary Howard H. Callaway is to receive soon a secret staff report on whether open-air testing of the new system will be required before production can begin.

A House Foreign Affairs subcommittee, conceding it lacks jurisdiction over the chemical warfare controversy, held a little-publicized series of hearings recently in an attempt to stir public debate before yet another sophisticated military delivery system is created by default.

Unlike the nerve gas now stockpiled in canisters ready for use, the new proposed "binary system" would keep two nerve gas ingredients separate — and harmless — until they are merged at the moment of firing.

The Pentagon insists the binary system is not a big new weapon but simply an improved delivery system which would make transportation and storage of nerve gas safer and cleaner.

Amos A. Jordan, acting assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, testified the U. S. needs the new system to deter use of chemical warfare in any future war.

Critics counter that nerve gas has not been used because it requires bulky protective suits and masks for all troops; there is no real defense for civilians; and once released, the gas is virtually impossible to control.

Nearly every country, including the Soviet Union but not the United States, is party to a 1925 Geneva protocol barring the use of chemical and biological warfare. Although the Senate has never ratified the treaty, a succession of presidents has reaffirmed the U.S. would never be the first to use such weapons.

Impeachment on your TV? Chances slim

From United Press International

Americans who planned to spend their summer watching impeachment hearings on television may as well make other plans.

The House Judiciary Committee faces so many legal problems in opening its proceedings to the public, that there appeared to be little chance any portion of the deliberations leading up to a mid-July vote on impeachment of President Nixon would be televised.

The White House has complained that the committee is dragging out the proceedings and wants them opened to the public.

The panel voted 23 to 15 last Thursday not to open the hearings this Tuesday as originally planned. On Friday, Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., decided that none of the committee's evidence would be made public until the panel had gone over all the material. This will take another two to three weeks — and longer if additional matter is provided by the White House, government agencies, courts or other congressional committees.

Only then will the committee decide which, if any, witnesses will be called to testify to fill in gaps the panel has determined exist in its evidence — and under House rules a witness could bar TV coverage during his testimony.

The final phase of debating and voting on articles of impeachment to be recommended to the full House also can be held — and probably would be — without television since that would take place in a committee "meeting" and unanimous consent of the 38 members is required to permit TV.

Nevertheless, officials at three TV networks — NBC, CBS and ABC — feel the hearings should be open and televised because possible impeachment of the President is of such importance that opening the hearings and televising them is vital to the democratic process.

The officials also said open hearings would ensure the belief the inquiry was being conducted fairly. They added that TV coverage would reduce selective leaks aimed at damaging the President and not aiding him.

Arab oil nations continue ban against Netherlands

From United Press International

Arab countries decided Sunday to keep their oil ban on the Netherlands but reaffirmed an earlier decision to continue fuel exports to the United States.

A special meeting of Arab oil ministers in Cairo overruled Algerian arguments that the oil ban on Holland be lifted after Saudi Arabia maintained its strong stand on the matter.

Representatives of the nine Arab countries will meet again July 10.

A conference spokesman said no actual vote was taken on the Dutch embargo, and a similar ban on Arab oil shipments to South Africa, Rhodesia and Portugal would remain in force.

In Vienna, the world's major oil producing nations recommended to their ministerial meeting later this month in Quito, Ecuador, that current oil prices remain frozen for the third quarter of this year but that government taxes on Western oil companies be increased to prevent them from making exorbitant profits.

The Economic Commission of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries met on the fourth day of its discussions to set oil prices after July 1 and suggested maintaining the crude oil price at $11.65 per barrel but increasing taxes from 55 to 87 per cent.

OPEC officials said oil companies were earning about $4 from each barrel of crude oil compared to 50 cents a barrel before the energy crisis.

In the Middle East, Israeli troops on the Lebanese frontier reported killing two Arab guerrilla infiltrators late Saturday who were carrying weapons, explosives and enough food for five days.

In Damascus, a guerrilla spokesman confirmed the two guerrillas were killed. But he said the raiding party "inflicted heavy losses on the enemy."

Israeli spokesmen reported no casualties of their own. They said it was assumed the infiltration was the latest in a series aimed at duplicating the May 15 attack on Maalot that left 31 persons dead.

The cease-fire on the Golan Heights front with Syria was reported holding firm, with the next prisoner exchange expected later this week. U.N. troops from Austria and Peru stood by to move in between the Israeli and Syrian armies.

In Jerusalem, Golda Meir's cabinet held its final meeting Sunday and heaped praise on Mrs. Meir on the eve of her turning the prime ministership over to Yitzhak Rabin.

Walther was the substitute driver.

Mideast cease-fire holding

From United Press International

Syrian and Israeli generals in Geneva Sunday held their second meeting through a Finnish go-between to work out the technical details of the military disengagement agreement signed Friday.

In the Middle East, Israeli troops on the Lebanese frontier reported killing two Arab guerrilla infiltrators late Saturday who were carrying weapons, explosives and enough food for five days.

In Damascus, a guerrilla spokesman confirmed the two guerrillas were killed. But he said the raiding party "inflicted heavy losses on the enemy."

Israeli spokesmen reported no casualties of their own. They said it was assumed the infiltration was the latest in a series aimed at duplicating the May 15 attack on Maalot that left 31 persons dead.

The cease-fire on the Golan Heights front with Syria was reported holding firm, with the next prisoner exchange expected later this week. U.N. troops from Austria and Peru stood by to move in between the Israeli and Syrian armies.

A paper presented to a meeting of the Palestinian National Council parliament also said the Soviet Union was making every effort to keep the United States from "monopolizing" peace initiatives in the Middle East.

Garment workers strike slated to begin today

NEW YORK (UPI) — The full impact of the first nationwide garment strike was expected to be felt Monday when more than 100,000 workers strike boys and men's clothing makers on orders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The action was directed at cutters, machine operators, buttonhole makers and other workers who are scheduled to set up picket lines unless a settlement is reached. Both sides said they were willing to resume negotiations on the call of a federal mediator. However, no date was set for a resumption of talks.

The union is seeking a wage increase and cost-of-living and fringe benefits clauses including larger pensions, more holidays and vacation time. The garment workers currently earn an average wage of $3.50 an hour.

The union called its last strike in the boys and men's apparel industry in 1920.

Pravda prints optimism about upcoming Nixon visit

• The advance word is good in the Soviet Union on President Nixon's forthcoming summit trip. The Community party newspaper Pravda, which gives the advance line on such things, said in its Sunday edition that the visit — to begin June 27 — opens possibilities for cooperation on a number of important problems, and probably would build on past summits between Nixon and party boss Leonid Brezhnev, in which they "laid a lasting foundation for Soviet-American cooperation on the basis of peaceful coexistence."

• There was no comment Sunday from the Silver Hill Foundation Hospital in New Canaan, Conn., on the condition of Joan Kennedy, wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. Mrs. Kennedy was admitted to Silver Hill — a private psychiatric hospital for the wealthy — last week for a period of prolonged rest. A family spokesman said Mrs. Kennedy has been under continuing strain since the amputation of the cancer-infected leg of their eldest son last November. The only word on Mrs. Kennedy's condition came from the senator Saturday, when he said she was doing very well.

• The world had an old-fashioned, glittering coronation Sunday, as 18-year-old King Jigme Singye Wangchuk was proclaimed king — the "dragon king" — of the remote Himalayan kingdom of Bhutan. Now the world's youngest monarch, King Jigme sat cross-legged on an ornately carved gilt throne throughout the ceremony, which included a two-mile procession of chanting Buddhist monks and soldiers in medieval armor. King Jigme actually has ruled since the death of his father in July, 1972, but the coronation had to await a decent mourning period and the picking of the most auspicious

by LUISA GINNETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn you may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID THE CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresge, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, Grant, T.G.Y., Treaslers, McNaw and Netters.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommended disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfectant.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take. Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

Plan commission member seen as a Don Quixote

Monoson on a political quest: CAP

by LYNN ASINOF

Members of Wheeling's Citizens Action Program (CAP) see Gil Monoson, who recently disassociated himself from the group, as Wheeling's political Don Quixote.

CAP members were reluctant to react to Monoson's public disavowal of association with the "citizens' lobby," but indicated that Monoson may be in quest of more political power in the village.

Monoson ended his association with CAP last Tuesday, saying the would-be political party has restricted his freedom to speak openly on village issues. He said CAP should have taken a more active stand once indictments were returned against six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials Jan. 31, following a federal probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers.

THE PLAN COMMISSION member said the group was afraid of "stepping on people's toes," and said CAP members had longstanding associations that might make it difficult to take aggressive stands in favor of reform in village government.

CAP member Jack Metzger, also a member of the plan commission, declined to comment on Monoson's charges against CAP. "I wish him well in his quest as I would Don Quixote," he said.

Police and Fire Comr. Mike Moran, also a CAP member, also was reluctant to comment on Monoson's defection. He said, however, Monoson may be looking for more political associations than the CAP group can offer.

"Perhaps he felt that we weren't political enough, and that wasn't the original intent of CAP," Moran said.

Like Metzger, Moran said he wished Monoson well. "He very obviously expected more publicity and more political activity, and it was not to be there at this time," he said.

CAP SURFACED last November when seven local politicians announced the formation of a "citizens lobby," which had all the earmarks of a new political party. At that time the CAP leaders were linked to James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman who recently pleaded guilty to extorting $52,000 from three Wheeling developers.

The group consistently has denied affiliations with Stavros, and has also maintained that CAP is not a political organization.

CAP members were responsible for several public statements on local problems, but have made no such appeals since Stavros and five other former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted Jan. 31. The indictments followed a year long federal probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers.

Trustee William Hein, one of the organizers of CAP, was cautious in his reaction to Monoson's statements. "Remember, he is the one who disassociated himself with CAP," he said. "CAP did not disassociate themselves from Mr. Monoson. That's his prerogative."

HEIN SAID MONOSON may have felt restricted in his freedom to speak on village issues because he never asked the CAP organization for any help. He noted that Monoson himself admitted that CAP members never told him what to do. He said, therefore, charges that CAP restricted the plan commissioners are "totally unfounded."

When asked about the health of the CAP program, Hein said "CAP is the strongest organization in the Village of Wheeling."

Des Smet, a plan commissioner and CAP member, said he was surprised by Monoson's action. He said Monoson had never mentioned his discomfort with the group.

Smet also said that CAP doesn't have any political plans for the upcoming village election, and said the sole purpose of the group was "trying to see if there were some wrongs that we could right."

CAP members Hugh Wilson and Frank Schmittmann, both members of the Wheeling Park Board, were unavailable for comment.

Consulting firm to be interviewed by trustees

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will interview the consulting firm of Booz, Allen and Hamilton as the first step in obtaining a thorough review of all village operations.

The consulting firm is the first of several that the village plans to interview. Board members have endorsed the review, saying the village operations need close inspection as a result of the current scandal in Wheeling.

Six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted Jan. 31 following a year-long federal grand jury probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Two of the six already have pleaded guilty.

THE INTERVIEW is scheduled to follow regular board business, which includes several controversial and complex issues. Heading the list is the recommendations from the zoning board to change the village codes to allow helipads in the village.

The zoning board recommended allowing helipads rather than the more controversial heliports, saying the village needs emergency helicopter landings.

The request to change the codes came from Earl Reynolds, vice president of the Asplundh Tree Expert Co., which employs Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon. Resdents turned out in large number to oppose Reynolds' request, saying they did not want a heliport on the Asplundh property, 412 N. Milwaukee Ave.

The board also will review a stormwater control ordinance that would require nearly all Wheeling developers to provide stormwater retention facilities. All commercial and industrial developers would have to provide retention, as would all residential developers of projects larger than three acres.

THE ORDINANCE also would outline specific standards for construction of retention basins, control of siltation and erosion, in addition to requiring developers to retain larger amounts of stormwater.

Board members are scheduled to decide whether to proceed with zoning for a 112-unit condominium project proposed for the southeast corner of Manchester Drive and Wolf Road. Trustee Don Jackson has asked that zoning be delayed until more restrictive ordinances are passed controlling condominium, apartment and townhouse projects.

Appointments to various advisory boards and commissions are also slated for tonight's meeting.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Man, 31, arrested in tire-theft case

A 31-year-old Buffalo Grove man was charged with attempted theft after police said they caught him trying to put someone else's tire on his automobile last Thursday.

Police said Kenneth V. Holden, 705 Grove Dr., told them he had gotten a flat tire on his car and didn't have a spare. The tire came from a car owned by John C. Grovcock, 156 Buffalo Grove Rd., police said.

The arrest was made about 2 a.m. in the parking lot at 154 Buffalo Grove Rd., after police had responded to a call of a man jacking up a car in the lot. Holden was released after posting $100 bond. He will appear July 2 in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

PHEA membership meeting Wednesday

Teacher contract talks hit an impasse

by LUISA GINNETTI

The Dist. 23 Board of Education negotiating team has called an impasse in bargaining talks with the Prospect Heights Education Assn. for a 1974-75 teacher contract.

The decision was announced last week when the three-member board team failed to agree to the PHEA's request that a respite be called in negotiations to allow both sides time to consider further compromise.

According to terms set in the professional negotiating agreement binding both sides, four steps must now be taken before an outside mediator is called into the dispute:

- The board negotiating team must meet with all members of the association.

- The PHEA negotiating team must meet with the full board of education.

- Negotiating teams will meet with their respective organizations.

- Negotiating teams will meet again to see if impasse can be remedied.

KEN BATES, a member of the PHEA negotiating team and a teacher at MacArthur Junior High, said the teachers will hold a membership meeting at 3:15 p.m. Wednesday at MacArthur.

The board negotiating team has been invited to attend the session but Alan Krinsky, chairman of the board team, said this meeting is tentative because not all board negotiators may be able to attend.

Bates said the teachers will hold a meeting with or without the board negotiators.

Bates said the PHEA wants all four steps as defined in the agreement to be carried out before a mediator is brought in. "Our people have some very pointed questions they want to ask the board," Bates said.

He added that although the professional negotiating agreement calls for all four steps to be completed within 15 days of notification of impasse, more time may be necessary to get both sides together Bates said he believes they are "several weeks away from mediation."

KRINSKY SAID THE two sides are far enough apart that an agreement cannot be reached as negotiations stand now. When asked if the separation between the PHEA demands and the board proposal is substantial, Krinsky said "an inch is as good as a mile in this case."

Bates said the PHEA "anticipated" the board's action. "The board is taking a pessimistic view and looking at the darkest side of everything," Bates said.

The PHEA spokesman added that the teachers are confident more money will be coming to the district in state aid as a result of recent decisions in the Illinois General Assembly.

The Illinois Senate voted last week to restore some $70 million in state aid to local schools which had been cut from the budget by Gov. Daniel Walker.

BATES SAID THE board is apparently concerned that the legislature will not restore the full state aid package, cutting a substantial portion of funds to the district. The board is also apparently concerned, according to Bates, with the possibility of losing state aid if the complex equalizer formula index for Cook County is reduced.

Bates said only $17,500 separates the two sides with the PHEA seeking a total monetary package of $123,000 and the board offering a total package of $106,500.

"The question is what will the legislature do," Bates said. "We believe the funding is there and will be there."

If an impasse continues and a mediator is needed, an arbitrator will be chosen through a joint decision by both sides. Bates said if negotiations reach the point where an arbitrator is needed, it is likely that both sides will go back to their original demands with the PHEA seeking a total monetary package of $198,000 and the board offering a package of $78,500.

"Both sides can still do more compromising," Bates said.

agendas for elimination of sex-stereotyping in the classroom" and resources and followup planning including review of materials available for teacher and student use.

Objectives set up by the group for the bookmobile include:

- To expose children to supplementary non-sexist materials and expand their concepts of role identity.

- To expose school staff to supplementary non-sexist materials and sources both for professional and personal growth.

Materials the group proposes including in the bookmobile are books, slides, films, audio-tapes and others "presenting people in positive fulfilling life roles."

THESE MATERIALS could more specifically include biographies of men and women, books portraying "non-traditional" careers for men and women, "more realistic fictional accounts of children and adults" and non-sexist games.

The school board has agreed to study the task force proposals and has directed the administration to do likewise.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said Friday no decision has been made on what action, if any, will be taken on the suggestions.

"It's too premature for me to say that's a way we want to go," Gill said. "But I think there's definitely room for inservice teacher training in those areas."

TAMMY, THE monkey, and Michael Suarez, 9, of 300 S. Lancaster St., Mount Prospect, were reunited late last Thursday. The squirrel monkey had been living in neighborhood trees since his escape last Monday.

Alien seized here

A 20-year-old Wheeling resident has been turned over to U.S. Immigration authorities for deportation as an illegal immigrant.

Alberto S. Moreau, 350 W. Dundee Rd., was arrested about 1 p.m. Thursday. Police had gone to his residence with an arrest warrant for his brother, Gregory M. Soto. Soto, however, allegedly had returned to Mexico already.

Burglar makes haul at gas station

Eleven cases of motor oil, an electric calculator and $10 cash were stolen early Thursday from the Clark gas station, 310 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling police said Friday.

Police said the station front door was kicked in and a lock was pried off a storage shed between 12:30 and 12:56 a.m. The loss was estimated at $175.

'74-'75 salary contract still unsettled

Deadline passes for Harper, custodians

Negotiators for Harper College and the union representing the college custodians and maintenance men have missed their June 1 deadline for settling on a 1974-75 salary contract.

Representatives of the two sides met Friday morning and failed to reach agreement. Following the meeting, M. E. "Curley" Lore, organizational director for Local 11 of the Service Employees Union, called the Harper salary offer "unreal" and said, "We feel we're on dead center. It's not an impasse, but it feels like it's getting that way."

Lore said the union is asking for 14 per cent salary increases for the custodians and maintenance men. The proposal, he said, would increase the base pay for custodians from $8,777 to about $10,200.

WILFRED VON MAYR, director of personnel for the college, said he does not believe the talks will deadlock. "We'll reach an agreement with them," he said. "We were hoping to reach agreement by today, but it just didn't work out."

Von Mayr said his offer would provide an increase of 13 cents an hour for custodians who have been with the college for two years and have reached the top of the three-step salary schedule. For custodians below the top, Von Mayr said, raises would be about 9 per cent, including the amount they will receive by moving from one step on the salary scale to the other.

Lore rejected the idea of counting the raises included within the salary scale as part of the salary settlement. The college offer, Lore said, "is about 3 per cent by our figures."

LORE said the union wants salary increases equivalent to those given the college teachers and administrators. The salary contract with the college teachers provided for a $1,000 across-the-board raise and an additional increase of 2.5 per cent of a teacher's present salary.

Salary increases for college administrators, which are determined by merit evaluations, will average between 7 and 9 per cent according to action by the Harper board last month.

The next meeting between the union and college officials has been set for June 10.

Harper College sets 'Senior Citizens' Day'

June 12 has been designated "Senior Citizens' Day" at Harper College.

During the day, senior citizens will have an opportunity to tour the college, view films and receive information from community service agencies. Blood pressure testing also will be conducted.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Lunch will be available in the cafeteria.

The June 12 activities will begin with a tour of the college. Seniors will view facilities and receive information about services available to them. The group will visit the Dental Hygiene Clinic and the Learning Resources Center.

Reservations may be made for the June 12 Senior Citizens' Day by mail through the continuing education office, Harper College, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine or by phoning the office at 397-3000, ext. 233.

End play ends any problem

Oswald: "A look at the North-South cards only would suggest a seven diamond contract. It makes easily if diamonds break three-two. All declarer has to do is to draw trumps ruff one heart in dummy and discard the other heart on the fourth spade."

Jim: "Even seven notrump isn't too bad a contract. Not that it makes the way the East-West cards are set up, but it would wheel in a lot of the time."

Oswald: "Clubs don't break; diamonds don't break, the heart finesse is wrong and a careless declarer might actually get set at six notrump."

Jim: "He shouldn't be. There is a very simple end play to bring home twelve tricks."

Oswald: "South starts by cashing three diamonds. Then he runs off four spades while discarding a diamond from his hand. Next come three rounds of clubs. At this time West is known to be holding one diamond and two hearts. South throws West in with dummy's last diamond and West has to lead a heart to give South the last two tricks."

Herald opinion

Wheeling could use help

Several Wheeling trustees have expressed a willingness to seek a review of village government operations by a management consultant because of the corruption that has come to light in the past year.

We favor this kind of thorough study and urge the village board to commission one as soon as a reputable consulting firm can be found to do the job.

In the past decade, village government in Wheeling has been used to enrich political boss James Stavros and a select few of his cronies. Zoning deals, extortion and nepotism have gone hand-in-hand with a low level of competence in the conduct of village affairs.

A management consultant experienced in municipal operations could provide guidelines for reform that will enable village government to function more competently and thus avoid corruption.

When they begin to study Wheeling, the consultants will find its governmental structure is much the same as that of other suburbs untouched by scandal. The failings in Wheeling have been mostly human ones — dishonesty for some and, for others, an inability or unwillingness to see what was going on.

New procedures, safeguards and an increase in professionalism will go far to assure that Wheeling is lifted out of its pool of corruption.

Chief among the recommendations that should be part of any consultant's study is home rule. The village has access to home rule powers through referendum, a move that would enable it to adopt many of the following needed reforms:

- Civil service. Patronage and nepotism must end. Employees should be hired and promoted on a merit basis. Nothing less than a full civil service system will do the job.

- Elections. An end to the party state system in local elections would attract more qualified candidates, reduce the power of bosses like Stavros and help ensure that issues and not political affiliation are the basis of voter choice.

- Full disclosure. Trustees, commission members and department heads should make regular full disclosure of their income and economic interests.

- Department heads. All department heads and administrators must be given complete evaluations as to their backgrounds, qualifications and ability to function as their jobs require. Those who are not qualified should be replaced.

- Zoning reform. The village should revise and readopt a comprehensive plan and make all planning and zoning decisions on the basis of the plan, not back-room deals. Village officials must not testify in favor of petitioners who appear before boards and commissions. When a rezoning or other request is made, all owners or any others having any interest in the property in the past year should be disclosed. This would include those holding any options or purchase contracts and those receiving real estate sales commissions. Secret owners of bank trusts should be unmasked in any government dealings.

- Professional services. The village government needs more extensive and competent advice in legal, planning and financial matters. Trustees must see that both the administration and village boards and commissions have access to the necessary expertise on a day-to-day basis.

- Police department. Control over the police department by the village administration must be strengthened and political meddling by the police and fire commission must end. Command personnel should be given lie tests similar to those taken recently by Chicago police brass. Favoritism in assignments, promotions and discipline must end.

- Crime syndicate. The village must stop the spread of crime syndicate business operations in Wheeling.

- Liquor licensing. The control of liquor licenses should be in the hands of a strict, law-enforcing commission that deliberates publicly.

- Special assessments. The village needs a board of local improvements to assure that politically connected property owners aren't benefitting at taxpayers' expense from street, sewer or similar projects.

Tom Wellman's column

Media role: criticism

There still remains, in some persons' minds, the view that Richard Nixon, 37th President of the United States, should sit on a throne.

Despite the evidence to the contrary — that, if nothing else, Richard Nixon is a human being who possesses ordinary human frailties — he still has defenders who would lift him onto the throne.

For example, The Herald printed last Monday, in this page's "Fence Post" letters section, a letter from Tom Janus of Mount Prospect, who repeats a common confusion about the role of the press toward public officials in this country.

Such letters normally should stand without comment and rise or sink in the reader's mind on the basis of the interior logic or stupidity of the writer's thoughts. But as Janus' thoughts represent a common train of political thought, they deserve comment from this writer.

Janus' letter comes in response to The Herald's editorial call for Nixon's resignation. To Janus, the paper has "finally joined the ranks of the malicious, hate-mongering news media who presume they have the right, indeed the privilege, to tell the President of the United States what he should or should not do."

Well, Mr. Janus, we don't view ourselves as hate-mongering — and it certainly has been an important part of American journalistic history for newspapers to tell every elected official in this country EXACTLY what he or she should or should not do.

Richard Nixon wears no crown and warrants no immunity, for there has been no immunity to criticism granted to any other American president. Democrats and Republicans alike have received the scrutiny of the press. Sometimes that attention has been intemperate, but it has always been present.

There has been praise, too, for political leaders, but it is an axiom of journalism that the praise is forgotten more quickly than is the criticism.

Janus also asks about the Herald's authority, as a "small town, rinky-dink paper," to question the President's "physical, mental or moral condition."

Editorial pages, regardless of how readers view them, should serve as critics of just about everything, and the state of the President is a legitimate target.

Janus also contends that the news media have always charted a single course of action, and the President has "never done what the news media advised."

But the President has taken steps which at least a few editorial pages have supported, for there is a wide variety of thought represented on the editorial pages of American newspapers. We are not a monolithic conspiracy, for our range extends from the conservatism of Philip Crane to the liberalism of the wildest liberal you can imagine.

Where newspapers differ with your view of the world, Mr. Janus, is that we generally regard it as part of our sacred duty to comment on the conduct of public officials who serve us.

In some cases, that editorial criticism has been intemperate. Many officials have felt the sting of firebrand editorial criticism for some misdeeds which are imagined.

That is part of the American tradition, for we attempt, in an imperfect manner, to act as a safeguard against the crooks who can dominate this government, if permitted to do so.

Richard Nixon, whatever his strengths or whatever his weaknesses, must as a political official be subjected to fierce scrutiny, whether in the news columns or on the editorial pages. Even though Mr. Janus would disagree, most newspapers would defend that as part of the "American tradition and the welfare of this country."

Letters welcome

The Herald welcomes and encourages letters from readers. Letters are published in "The Fence Post" column; no anonymous mail is considered for publication, and we will not withhold names on request. Letters in excess of 300 words are subject to condensation. Direct your mail to Herald Fence Post, P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

'Guard needs legislation'

Fence post

letters to the editor

I am writing about some very serious problems facing our Illinois National Guard.

The Defense Department has designated the guard as our first line of defense, trained and equipped for immediate deployment. The total force (Regular-Guard-Reserve) is no longer a concept but it is our defense policy. Factually, the Army National Guard represents 30 per cent of the entire organized Army structure, 46 per cent of all the Army's combat elements. The Air National Guard contains 38 per cent of the Tactical Air Command's total strength, and 70 per cent of the air defense jet interceptor force.

Additionally, the Illinois Guard constitutes our state military force, available to protect Illinois citizens in time of natural disaster and civil disturbance. The 49,169 Illinois Guardsmen called to

Lauds paramedics

Three weeks ago, our father, George Hinrichs, suffered a severe heart attack. We called the Schaumburg Fire Department and within minutes, the ambulance and paramedics were there.

Without the skillful and fast teamwork of the paramedics, we wouldn't want to think of what the outcome may have been.

Without a doubt, the paramedics and fire department of Schaumburg are one of the greatest assets we have in our community. We can never thank them enough.

schools, to youths who join the Guard. The proposed amendment, House Bill 2118, recognizes services rendered and about to be rendered, to the state by the Illinois National Guard.

I am asking your help in alerting our citizens to this amendment. Admittedly it may not in itself determine an enlistment or a re-enlistment. But it supports the need for help in maintaining strength during these very serious "no-draft" times.

Illinois has a fine and very able National Guard — with your good support we can attract quality young men and women — who are so much needed during these times.

Ford strays from Nixon

by HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — Not since Franklin Delano Roosevelt tried to tame maverick John Nance Garner has a President had a tougher time than President Nixon in holding his vice president in the old corral.

Try as he may, Nixon has just about lost the support of his handpicked vice president, Gerald R. Ford, over his Watergate strategy.

Nixon had two recent talks with Ford, hoping to keep him in line with the White House moves against impeachment, or at least to urge the vice president to lower his profile. But to no avail.

The first time, Ford said Nixon adsistance by Nixon could lead to his impeachment in the House.

Ford, who is tuned in with Congress after 23 years in the House, has urged Nixon to stop "stonewalling" and to seek a compromise with the House Judiciary Committee. So far, he has not been able to persuade the President to soften his stand even though Ford thinks it will stiffen views of House members who would like to support Nixon.

In a series of interviews and news conferences, Ford says he hopes the President will turn over Watergate material "the sooner, the better."

White House spokesmen say Nixon feels he is doing the right thing in preventing an "excessive encroachment" on the confidentiality of presidential documents in a "highly pressurized" atmosphere.

The President's press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, told UPI: "often times there is an effort to drive a wedge between the President and vice president but that's, I guess, part of the situation we're in now."

Ziegler said relations between Nixon and Ford "are excellent."

But some presidential aides are asking what Ford is "up to." They question whether his failure to go down the line with Nixon is a self-buildup.

Ford regularly denies he has 1976 presidential designs. And he strongly expresses the view that the President is innocent of any wrongdoing in Watergate. At the same time, he insists that he will be his "own man."

Presidents traditionally demand subservience of vice presidents. Even when he was running for the presidency in 1968, then-Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey found that every time he tried to break with President Johnson's Vietnam policy, Johnson pulled him up short.

Johnson also chafed as vice president under John F. Kennedy, but he did it silently.

It may be a measure of the severely weakened presidency that Nixon does not rebuke Ford openly.

Cabinet members also have been speaking more candidly. During Nixon's first administration, a Cabinet officer would have been chastized or dismissed for the kind of independence some now display. Walter J. Hickel was sacked as interior secretary after he revised him not to throw himself out by "taking too many trips." Political observers took that to mean that Nixon would like to see the vice president cut down on his speaking schedule during which he frequently urges greater presidential cooperation with Watergate prosecutors and House impeachment investigators.

Ford has expressed the view such re-

With vegetables, you needn't worry about cholesterol

Is it true that some nuts do not contain cholesterol? What about chestnuts and peanuts?

Nuts contain no cholesterol. Cholesterol is an animal product found in the flesh of animals and such products as milk and eggs. Just remember that if the product is from the vegetable kingdom it is cholesterol-free.

The catch is that large amounts of fat cause our liver to produce more cholesterol. This appears to be particularly true of saturated fats common in animals and in coconut oil. Almost all raw nuts are high in fat. Part of this fat is saturated fat.

About 87 per cent of the calories in peanuts is fat and 15 per cent of the calories is saturated fat. That is not very good from a nutritional point of view, if you want to avoid fat and saturated fat. English walnuts would be better since only 82 per cent of their calories is fat and quite remarkably only 5 per cent of their calories is from saturated fat. They are rich in polyunsaturated fat.

Raw chestnuts are an exception in the nut group and are really a low fat food. They are more like a bean. Only 6 per cent of their calories are from fat. Obviously neither peanuts nor chestnuts contain cholesterol since they are from the plant kingdom.

This is a different kind of question from an 80-year-old woman in excellent health. Is it possible at her age to revitalize flaccid muscles of the upper arms and inner thighs by exercise? She had been a swimmer for years when her body was in fine form (firm and rounded). It's different now.

Yes, there is no difference in muscle fibers in older people and younger people. A muscle is enlarged and its strength increased by placing it under progressive weight loads, such as in weight lifting. You don't need to use weights to do this.

You can exercise your arms against resistance and this puts the muscle fibers under load and will stimulate their enlargement and increase their strength. If a muscle's strength cannot be increased or it cannot grow, it is usually because of poor circulation to the muscle.

JUST TO USE a well-known public illustration of what strength or resistant exercises can do for your muscles, Gov. George Wallace of Alabama has pointed out recently that he is a lot stronger in the upper part of his body than he ever was before he was shot. With the subsequent paralysis of the lower part of his body he has built up all the muscles in his arms and shoulders so that he can use them to help himself get around.

This growth and increase in muscle mass in this area of the body has been a direct result of resistance or strength-type training. You don't have to be in your 20s to develop good muscle mass.

I do think as you get older it is even more important to check with your doctor about the types of exercises you do. The group of people who should be particularly careful about weight lifting and strength-type exercises are those who already have high blood pressure. These firm contractions of muscles can sometimes significantly increase blood pressure levels.

Meet Kathy Wiggins

Leader of Jaycee Wives

by ELEANOR RIVES

Kathy Wiggins of Rolling Meadows wears three hats.

One as president of the Rolling Meadows Jaycee-ettes, a term of office she will complete this month. The second as president of the Jaycee Wives of Illinois' North Region, an office she assumed March 31.

The third hat, a literal one, is the stovepipe hat of Lincoln, topping the black and white outfit which identifies that portion of the 30,000 men, women and children at Jaycee national conventions who represent the state of Illinois. North Region Jaycee Wives designed and made the costumes — some 50 to 60 of them — two years ago.

To understand the function of the North Region Jaycee Wives, one must understand the Jaycee Auxiliary; to understand the auxiliary, one must understand the Jaycees.

NO LONGER does Jaycee stand for Junior Chamber of Commerce. It is an organization for all young men of action, 18 through 35, and its purpose is to develop in its members "leadership qualities through community service."

The auxiliary, whether it is called Jaycee-ettes, Jaycee Wives or whatever, consists of the young women behind the young men, supporting their beliefs and activities.

"Our motto is 'Cooperation without competition,'" said Kathy. "In very few other places can you work together with your husband."

In Rolling Meadows, Jaycee community service takes the form of sponsoring a boys baseball team, visits and gifts from Santa to shut-ins and hospital patients and "trick or treat" coupons rather than candy at Halloween. The Jaycees give the park district a hand with the winter carnival and conduct local and regional speed skating competition.

THEIR ANNUAL spring project, a carnival held specifically to raise funds for fireworks for Rolling Meadows Fourth of July celebration, will be in full swing June 20 through 23 at Topp's parking lot. At the July 4 celebration, Jaycees will offer free train rides; Jaycee-ettes, free pony rides. Both will man the food booth.

"Jaycee-ettes supplement the work force whenever needed," said Mrs. Wiggins. "Our first and foremost concern is to support our husbands in whatever way we can."

The Rolling Meadows Jaycee-ettes find time for independent projects, too, such as the recent fund-raiser sale of 300 Mother's Day corsages. They are great donors: Thanksgiving baskets to needy families, a "training arm" for Rolling Meadows paramedics, a "Resuscitator" to Northwest Community Hospital, money for Rolling Meadows Christmas decorations, tables and chairs to Clearbrook Center.

In addition, they entertain the Jaycees with several mixed social events each year.

WHEN KATHY AND Bob Wiggins moved to Rolling Meadows as young marrieds six years ago, they were anxious to make new friends, and Bob, an engineer associate at Western Electric, found the opportunity to do so by joining the Jaycees. Six months later, Kathy joined the Jaycee-ettes. For 1972-73, she was its treasurer, and for the '73-74 term, became its president.

Serving as a chapter representative, Kathy became acquainted with the work of the North Region Jaycee Wives, which was formed only four years ago when a group of women from various auxiliaries recognized the possible advantages of banding together on a regional basis.

"IT PROVIDES AN opportunity to share and learn from each other's failures and successes, to improve the individual chapters," said Kathy, who served as publications director of North Region before she was elected its president for the '74-75 year.

North Region Jaycee Wives includes

Jaycee auxiliaries in the northeast corner of Illinois, including northwest suburban chapters. Auxiliaries may be included or not, as they wish. At present, 27 of a possible 51 chapters belong. Each sends a representative to the regional meetings, held four times a year and open to all interested auxiliary members. A meeting may draw as many as 200 people.

"YOU MEET A LOT of good kids with some real fine ideas," said Kathy. "It's the place to air your views and exchange ideas. We have seminars which probe some of the individual chapters' better projects. And we have special programs and speakers to help the local chapters."

This past year, North Region Jaycee Wives started a "Speak-Up" competition to encourage auxiliary members to learn to speak comfortably before a crowd. Chapter winners competed at the regional level with a five-minute prepared speech and a two-minute impromptu speech.

Roxy Eckstrom of Hoffman Estates won the first regional competition, demonstrating outstanding ability in public speaking. Lynn Peterson of Schaumburg was runner-up.

ANOTHER REGIONAL goal is to provide playground equipment for a camp for crippled children in McHenry, Ill. To this end, a continuous drive for Betty Crocker coupons is carried on.

Three hats may top the pretty head of Kathy Wiggins, but she wears each one with cool efficiency and calm capability. Even as her jobs overlap, the Jaycee-ette presidential term ending, the regional presidential term unfolding, another step in auxiliary organization is taking place — the combining of auxiliaries and regions to form the Illinois Jaycee Wives, a state-embracing organization.

Rolling Meadows Jaycee-ettes will be well represented. Another of its members, one who was 1972-73 North Region Jaycee Wives president and another ball of fire, Robbye Thornton has been elected interim state president.

"LINCOLN-LAND" uniform identifies Illinois delegates at national Jaycee conventions. They were seen by North Region Jaycee Wives, whose new president is Kathy Wiggins, seated, retiring president of Rolling Meadows Jaycee-ettes. Her North Region predecessor, Robbye Thornton, now serves as interim president of the emerging state organization of Jaycee Wives. Mrs. Wiggins is also a full-time public health nurse.

Where arts are used as therapy

by GAY PAULEY

To Florence Tyson, music hath charms especially beneficial in the treatment of disturbed and handicapped children and adults.

Similar therapy, she holds, works through art and dance.

Miss Tyson, a trained musical therapist, pioneered the Creative Arts Rehabilitation Center, of which she now is executive director. The center is a non-profit, non-sectarian organization that acts as a community extension of the treatment a patient is receiving in hospitals, public or private, or under private psychiatric care.

She believes the center is unique in the nation but sees no reason why similar centers could not be operated in other communities and has written a basic pamphlet on how to begin one.

"Ours grew out of my work with a philanthropy that had a hospital music therapy program," she said in an interview.

"I COULD DETECT that between the patients' visits that the usual institutional therapy was not enough.

"I thought, 'Why aren't we out there?'"

That was around 1962 and today "we out there" consists of the center's college-trained therapists in music, dance, art, and a consulting psychologist, who work with the patients on a weekly, twice-weekly, or daily basis as needed.

"Most of our patients fall in the 18-to-35-year-old category," she said. "But oh, we need to afford to reach the children."

Miss Tyson doesn't bog down in technical terms when she talks of how the program works other than to say that "the arts seem the direct line to the subconscious."

"Most of our patients are in music. Music has such an intense personal meaning. Something they've always loved, but could not express. Music seems to reach the deepest inhibitions and frustrations, the fear of failing, the feeling of utter demoralization."

"WE HAD ONE MALE patient who kept remembering some of the chords he'd heard from the 'Moonlight Sonata.' With the therapist, he began to pick it out by ear, by pattern of notes. Once he mastered it, a need satisfied, a new desire took over."

"He started music lessons."

"But a patient need not know anything about the arts. That's up to us. There is no curriculum, no book, no timetable, no pressure."

"In music we work with both vocal and instrumental. Dance isn't a formal thing. It's just expression through the body. Art provides a wonderful clue to us of some of the hangups."

Patients come on referral, mostly from the New York State area but also from around the country. The list of referral sources, other than from private psychiatry, runs from "A" for Alfred Adler Mental Hygiene Clinic to "Y" for Youth Residence Center.

DETERMINATION OF fee is on an individual basis, but it averages out at about $7.50 per session. Miss Tyson said the case load runs about 70 per week with patients ranging from "mildly neurotic to deeply psychotic . . . suicidal."

Her files are full of case histories but one she mentions often was the subject of one of the center's films available to other rehabilitation groups.

She was Chryssa, as the film called her, and she was emotionally disturbed almost beyond belief of recovery. She had lost her mother when she was 7, her impoverished father could not keep the family together, and life became a series of abuses and placements in 10 foster homes and three years in an orphanage.

Referred from the psychotherapy unit of a New York hospital, the girl, now 30, was "angry, easily provoked rejection, has wide mood swings." She had, in the course of 14 years of therapy, not been able to speak, rather to express herself only through body movements.

Miss Tyson began her with dance therapy. She then went into the music sessions. The happy ending is that ultimately she attended Columbia University Teachers College, has a master's degree and is teaching children.

Suburban Living

You can't run a home on logic

Now that I am learning to live with Women's Lib I am, as I have mentioned before, discovering all kinds of loopholes in it. One giant one became evident to me this weekend as my husband and I were visiting with Alice and Henry Flaxton, who live next door.

The men, after a few beers, began teasing us women about our inefficiency in running our houses. Husbands have a way of doing that. The fact that our husbands are not exactly helpless around the house made the teasing harder to take. They both compared stories of how, on the occasions that they have stayed home with the children, that each day they had the downstairs cleaned and the third load of laundry in the washer by 10 a.m.

Today Alice and I were grousing about our husbands' smug supremacy at their successful part-time jobs as housewives.

"I HAVE TO ADMIT that I think they really want to make our lives easier by offering us their suggestions for organizing the house and family," Alice said. "But the problem is that they expect us to run our operation as a business!"

I agreed wholeheartedly, and later I realized that it is exactly this point that the Women's Lib Movement has missed in trying to liberate the housewife.

It is easy — in theory — to cope with the kind of husband who expects his wife to be a maidservant. But what do you do with the guy who honestly thinks an inventory control system would solve the problem of sorting summer clothes?

I would like Women's Lib people to come up with some suggestions on how to handle this kind of basically affable husband in a variety of frustrating situations.

I would like to know how to convince him that you can't fire your 12-year-old son for failing to clean the garage.

HOW CAN I GET it through his head that you can't project that your daughter can consume all of the strawberries you have set aside for a desert for a dinner party?

Is there a way to explain that in an effort to be organized, you save the kitchen to clean while you're on the phone, and if no one calls you, of course, it won't get done?

A lot of husbands believe that keeping a home and managing a family is simply a matter of logic. And I find it less than heartening that many Women's Lib people harbor the idea that women have suppressed their ability to think logically and have preferred to retreat behind the myth that they are intuitive rather than logical. In this way Women's Lib is supporting our loving and logical, but misunderstanding husbands.

Can't anyone besides a housewife and mother understand that it is illogical to presume that a family and home can be run logically? Alice and I would like to know.

Get back in shape while you swim

Everybody into the pool!

It just might be warm enough one of these days to take advantage of the swimming pools and lake. One of the best things about summer is swimming and this pastime is one of the easiest, most natural, all-around forms of exercise.

Don't be caught off-guard with flabby thighs, a protruding tummy or a bulging upper arm. But if you are, firm up, trim down and get back in shape while at the pool.

It's a great way to tone and tighten your body and exercises are much more effective when done in the water because of the water's resistance to pushing.

Here is a program of water exercises for anyone who is a little behind on a trim and slim for summer schedule.

FOR THE HIPS AND THIGHS: Grasp

the ball between your hands at chest level, really stretching your arms. Bring the ball back up slowly.

Have fun at the beach and don't feel embarrassed doing your exercises. Anyone who isn't doing it will just feel guilty watching you work out.

Fabric dyes can be used to tint vinyl plastic sunglasses frames if the lenses are made from glass. Plastic will absorb color, but glass will not.

Remember that your feet probably need some attention before you bare them to the world in open-toed sandals this summer. Use the same steps on your toes that you do on your fingers — wash and dry feet thoroughly, trim toe nails, being careful to leave smooth edges, remove excess cuticle and polish carefully.

A good setting lotion will help keep the curl in your hair during the summer's heat and humidity, but if your straight locks resist curling, a professional permanent may be the answer.

hard push on the downkick so you strike the water forcibly. Try this three or four times at first and work up gradually to 20.

FOR ARM MUSCLES: Stand shoulder high in water, crossing one arm in front of your body with palm on chest. Now straighten out your arm to the side pushing back against the water. After each complete movement, repeat with the other arm. 20 times on each.

FOR THE BOSOM: You'll need a volleyball or beach ball for this one. Standing shoulder high in water, tightly clasp

Egg stain requires nylon scrubber, strong cleaner

Dear Dorothy: Franksters or vandals threw eggs up on our pale yellow aluminum siding last Halloween. We weren't able to get it to then to clean it and the eggs have turned into a dark brownish-black stain. Lately, we've been trying to remove this stain, but are failing. Can you help? — M.E.C.

With such a long-standing stain you are going to have to try more than the usual recommended mild solutions. Try a step-up basis. First, mix two ounces of washing machine detergent in six quarts of warm water. A stronger treatment would be trisodium phosphate, following directions on the label.

The solvent cleaners are stronger still, with the end of the line being the abrasive heavy-duty cleaners like the cleanser which contains oxalic acid. Use one of the strong nylon scrubbers in working at this stain. You're going to get scratches but this undoubtedly will be preferable to the ugly stain. Whatever you try, remember to rinse well.

Dear Dorothy: When you have very little space for a garden and you love flowers, are there any vegetables that would look "cozy" among the flowers? — Martha Matheson.

Do you like asparagus and rhubarb? These look fine either as a backdrop for flowers or placed anywhere among other plants. Both are perennials so you don't have to think about planting them each year. Another attractive perennial is the cherry tomato — not only colorful but delicious.

Dear Dorothy: The reason frozen unbaked pie crusts are so short and flaky when baked is that the freezing has drawn out most of the moisture, leaving the dough with just the shortening and whatever seasoning was used. — Joanna Campbell

'Pool of Youth'

Turcotte, Havlicek — age doesn't stop these champions

"One thing that surprised me down at Lauderdale was the banquet we attended. Five hundred sixty-eight people in the whole room and only one of them smoking."

Sound like a national "I kicked the habit" club? Well, kind of.

Frank Havlicek, a member of the Northwest Suburban YMCA, was recalling the very successful trip he took recently to Florida. He and Bobbi Turcotte, who is associated with Buehler YMCA, were among 631 participants in the Masters Swimming Meet at Ford Lauderdale.

Havlicek, swimming in the 55-59 age group, and Turcotte, competing in the women's 45-49 bracket, set several national records in this fifth annual meet that drew 561 participants from locations as far removed from Florida as California and Hawaii.

The Masters Swim program is the brainchild of Dr. Ransom Arthur, a member of the Navy's neuropsychiatric department. Arthur's initial interest in the effects of swimming on the physical conditioning of older individuals began in 1970 with the development of the Masters programs.

The national meet that first year in Amarillo, Texas drew 50 entrants. The huge turnout this year at the Amateur Athletic Union event demonstrates the increasing popularity of this sport among older Americans.

One of the not so well known swimmers is Gail Roper, a member of the 1952 U.S. Olympic team. She swims 10,000 yards, or nearly five and half miles a day, and is turning in better times now than when she swam in the Olympics.

Turcotte, who is program director at Buehler in Palatine, broke national marks in the 100-meter backstroke by nearly three seconds and the 200-meter backstroke by nearly six. (There are 11 age groups of five-year increments with men or women between the ages of 25 and 80 eligible to enter the program.)

In a meet held two weeks ago at Milwaukee, she took nearly two seconds off the national record for the 50-yard backstroke.

Havlicek, who believes he is a distant relative of Boston Celtic forward John Havlicek, competes out of the Des Plaines Y. Workouts before a meet average about a mile a day for Havlicek, time commitments making it impossible for him to get in any more swimming than that.

At Lauderdale he was the victim of advancing technology as the highly accurate electronic method of timing caused him to lose three races by a total of nine-tenths of a second.

He won the 200-meter individual medley, a race that calls for the use of four separate strokes, at Lauderdale. In the 100-yard butterfly and 100-yard medley he was touched out both times for first by minute silvers of time.

Swimming in the same Milwaukee meet as Turcotte, Havlicek set a national record of 1:12 in the 100-yard medley.

The benefits Havlicek receives from the program are at once obvious and surprising. He expected to improve his physical condition and he has done that.

"Since beginning the Masters program," Havlicek says, "I've lost 14 pounds and an inch off my waist. I feel very fit. The program also provides a great deal of mental relaxation. When I swim that is all I think about."

The less obvious benefit, but no less important to Havlicek, is an increased rapport with young people.

"The kids at the Y," he says. "See us working out and they have a little more respect for us. They say, 'Hey, you guys really work hard.' It seems to surprise them."

Falcons dedicate Hal Sprehe Field with division victory

by KEITH REINHARD

Forest View's baseball team found the most fitting way it could to baptize Hal Sprehe Field Friday afternoon.

Following ceremonies dedicating the Falcon diamond in honor of the former Forest View baseball pilot, the team proceeded to nose out Prospect 2-1 and seal up their second straight Mid-Suburban League South Division title.

The verdict was much to the delight of Mrs. Sprehe and daughters Karla, Karen and Kathy, who were all on hand for the ceremonies and game. Hal Sprehe had been the first baseball coach when the school opened in 1962 and remained at the helm until his accidental death nearly five years ago.

The final outcome was also much to the dismay of the visiting Knights and their twirler Kevin Kelley, since they needed a win to remain in contention for the division crown. The normally hard slugging Prospect nine was pretty well handcuffed by Falcon pitcher Keith Mallan but countered with a standout mound performance by Kelley.

Through five frames there was no scoring at all and when the Knights finally did dent the run column first, they needed help from the opposition. That, too, was surprising since heading into the fifth the Falcons had supported Mallan magnificently defensively with Kelley's one-base shot up the middle being Prospect's only hit of the game.

With one away in the top of the sixth, the hosts misgloved consecutive grounders by Scott Hetherington and Jim Anderson. Mike Quade proceeded to rip a single down the left field line, scoring Hetherington and giving his team a 1-0 lead.

Anderson was out on the same play trying to reach third and Mallan got the next batter on a ground out to quell the uprising. And after Forest View failed to rally in their half of the sixth, coach Tom Seidel came back with his racehorse mound veteran Larry Monroe to insure of no further threatening in the top segment of the seventh.

That move also served to provide Monroe with his seventh conference win in a row this season when the Falcons batted out in the last stanza. Gregg Pfaff opened it with a walk and Dave Mileski's spinner behind second was subsequently muffed, putting runners on first and second.

Neil Schmidt then singled to left center and Pfaff raced home with the tying run, Mileski going to third. Ken Butzen was purposely passed, loading the bases to set up a force at any base and Prospect converted defensively into a six-man infield in hopes of nipping the advance runner at the plate.

Don Stevens had other ideas, however. He laced a healthy fly to center field and Mileski trotted home with the game-winning and pennant-winning run.

Forest View still has a game remaining with Palatine to close out their regular campaign today. On Wednesday they are tentatively slated to pair off at home against Fremd in a rematch for the MSL title.

Should the Falcons win Wednesday, another game will be set up for either Thursday or Friday to resolve the championship.

Forest View shocks Elk Grove, 20-7!

by CHARLEY DICKINSON

Perhaps sensing an opportunity to erase some of their frustration at losing a 1-0 ballgame in the state sectionals, Forest View pounded Elk Grove, 20-7, Thursday and ended the Gens' 1974 Mid-Suburban League season on a bitter note. Elk Grove finished 5-11 in the MSL South Division.

Played in weather that grew increasingly cold and miserable with each inning, the Falcons exploded for five runs in the top of the second and although Elk Grove got three in their half of the second, they never seriously threatened Forest View.

Jim Campbell's homer with Tom Culkar and David Mileski on was the big hit in that inning. Don Stevens singled to Greg Pfaff and Culkar added an RBI of his own as he walked and forced in a run as the Falcons batted through their line up.

Culkar also homered in the three run fifth inning that stretched the Forest View lead to 10-4. Ken Butzen had reached earlier on an error by David Miller and Jim Petran had gotten on base with a single to center.

The Falcons had one more big inning in them and it was a monster. Bill Simon opened it with his second hit of the day, a home run. The following five men in the Falcon batting order reached one way or another and all scored.

Only Greg Pfaff, who flew out to centerfield, failed to get in on the fun.

Simon gathered in another extra base hit as the Falcons batted around again, this time a double that drove in runs bringing his RBI total for the game to four. In all, the seventh inning saw the Falcons producing nine runs on seven hits.

Elk Grove had a pair of three-run innings, but only in the sixth was a hit involved in the scoring.

Forest View head coach Tom Seidel contemplates a move ... makes his decision ... and ponders its results. The Falcons lost 1-0 in last week's sectional baseball championship.

Hardware team grabs lead in twilight league

Action resumed this week for the Tuesday Division of the Mount Prospect Twilight Golf League after a two-week rain-enforced layoff, and a new name popped into the divisional first place slot.

Led by Captain Jim Driscoll's one-over-par 37, Anderson-Biermann Hardware overpowered Kirchhoff Insurance 8-2, taking over first place by a comfortable 3 1/2 point margin.

Driscoll's round was highlighted by birdies on the par four, 11th, and the par five 15th. His opponent, Ed Pociask, not to be outdone, birdied the 13th and 17th holes, but faltered with a few bogies on the other holes to lose the match to his speedy opponent.

Keefe's Pharmacy, meanwhile, clung to second place in spite of a 5 1/2 to 4 1/2 loss to Meeske's Supermarket. Meeske's victory moved them into a tie for third with Annen & Busse Realtors, who were dumped out of first place after their 8-2 defeat by Licht's Palat Store.

In other matches, J & B Meat Market finally broke into the victory column with a meager but satisfactory 6-4 win over Mount Prospect State Bank, Illinois Range easily subdued George L. Busse & Co. 8-2, and Louie's Barber Shop trimmed Arch-Annon, Inc. with a similar 8-2 score.

Scoring improved somewhat, as the "A" players returned to action. Art Carlson took low gross honors with an even par 36 over the second nine. Other good scores were Jim Driscoll's 37, and Wayne White's 38.

The low net award was shared by Bill Myers with a gross 49 net 27, and Ron Bittner with a 54-27 round.

Birdies were reported by J. Driscoll on 11 and 15; E. Pociask on 13 and 17; A. Carlson 18; and Chuck Dresser 4.

New league standings are Anderson-Biermann Hardware, 22; Keefe's Pharmacy 18 1/2; Meeske's Supermarket 17 1/2; Annen & Busse Realtors 17 1/2; Licht's Palat Store 16 1/2; Mt. Prospect State Bank 15; Illinois Range 14; Arch-Annon, Inc. 14; Louie's Barber Shop 13; George L. Busse & Co. 13; Kirchhoff Insurance 11; J & B Meat Market 8.

American Academy captures regional gymnastics crown

Members of the boys team from the American Academy of Gymnastics in Des Plaines, captured the top all-around honors in the U.S.G.F. Junior Olympic Regional Gymnastics Championships held at Wheaton Central High School.

Competitors from Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky were eligible to compete in the meet sponsored by the Midwest Gymnastics Association.

Mount Prospect's Dean Hellekson succeeded in taking first place in the all-around competition with 48.7 points. Dean also recorded first in side horse, notched a second in horizontal bar, parallel bars and still rings, and settled for a third on vaulting.

Henry DeGrob of Arlington Heights took third on still rings and parallel bars.

The Academy's Dewey Bent of Buffalo Grove was awarded first place in the 12-15 year old all-around competition with 51.3 points. Dewey exploded for first in five events — side horse, horizontal bar, floor exercise, parallel bars and vaulting, while placing third on still rings.

Jeff Vanyek of Prospect Heights followed Dewey with a second place in the all-around competition with 47.9 points. Jeff found himself tied for first with Dewey on the side horse, took second on still rings, floor exercise and parallel bars and tied for third on vaulting.

The Academy was also proud of Mount Prospect's Doug Dawson and Ron Bartusiak for their finer performances.

Dewey and Jeff will represent the region in the Junior Olympic National Gymnastics Championships for 12-14 year olds being held in Illinois in August. The first place winner will receive a free trip and travel with the United States Gymnastics team to the World Games in Munich, Germany during October.

Southern Illinois University to host 3 gymnastics camps

High school gymnasts, come to attention! Southern Illinois University head coach Bill Meade and Jack Blesterfeldt, the Saluki assistant, have something they'd like you to consider.

Three separate one week sessions of intensive gymnastics training will be held on the school's Carbondale campus, beginning Sunday, June 23, and you're invited if you've not yet begun your senior year of high school at that time.

Including that one stipulation, the program meets every eligibility requirement set down by the Illinois High School Association.

What will you get for $75 per week? Meade and Blesterfeldt will head a coaching staff that includes these collegiate head coaches: Indiana State's Roger Council, Northern Illinois' Chuck Ehrlich and Oklahoma's Paul Ziert.

Additionally, top collegiate gymnasts from SIU, NIU, Iowa State, Illinois State, Indiana State, Oklahoma, California at Berkeley, Oregon, Michigan and Massachusetts will be on hand to serve as counselors and leaders.

A special guest instructor will be Dale Hardt, an international level trampolinist who will assist in that event plus floor exercise. Hardt also plans his own "Tumble Town" camp for girls from June 24-29 and July 22-27.

The men's camp will run in concurrent one week sessions from June 23-29, June 30-July 6 and July 7-13. Pre-registration necessitates a health certificate, available at your school or an acceptable note, signed by a health officer and certifying good health while listing any physical limitations.

Applicants may sign up for one, two or three sessions. A $25 deposit is payable only once and is deductible from the $75 weekly cost. Total payment must be made before the gymnast begins his first session.

All campers will be housed in the Wilson Hall dormitory which has available television, an outdoor swimming pool, tennis and billiard facilities. Wilson Hall is approximately six blocks from downtown Carbondale where a movie house and other recreation is available.

The gymnastics program will be extensive, starting at 7 a.m. daily with mandatory breakfast and sometimes extending into the evening with rest and meal breaks scheduled. There will be individual attention to every gymnast. No more than 10 campers will be assigned to any instructor at one time.

Free time (and there will be some!) may also be spent at nearby Campus Lake which has an excellent beach plus boating and fishing. Most workouts will be held within the SIU Arena, less than 200 yards away.

Registration has been excellent, but there are still openings for dedicated gymnasts. If you're not a serious worker, don't sign up. For more details or an application, write: SIU Summer Gymnastics Camp, c/o Mr. Lowell Hall, Division of Continuing Education, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Ill., 62901.

For information on the girls' "Tumble Town," write: Dale Hardt, 611 Skyline Drive in Carbondale.

Train teachers as 'non-sexists': parents' group

by JILL BETTNER

A School Dist. 21 parent group has asked the school board to provide teacher training aimed at eliminating sexual bias in the classroom.

The Citizens Task Force on Education, headed by Judy Brady-Keller and Carol Wrabi of Arlington Heights, last week requested the board to set up the training and offered to assist in conducting workshops or other sessions. The task force is a self-appointed group and was not organized by the school board.

In addition to the teacher training, the group also has proposed the creation of a bookmobile to circulate non-sexist materials around Dist. 21 schools enabling teachers to supplement textbooks already in use.

THE GROUP CONDUCTED a survey of educational materials used in Dist. 21 about two months ago and concluded that many contain and/or stereotyped sex roles.

Following the survey, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of the objectionable materials. In response, the board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.

The proposals for teacher training and a bookmobile are two of the parent group's ideas for implementing the board policy.

A PROPOSED OUTLINE for the teacher training program drawn up by the task force lists the objectives of the training as:

- To enable participants to gain an awareness of the manifestations of sex stereotyping in education and its implications for the future.
- To offer methods whereby school personnel can develop their own strategies for eliminating sex discrimination in the classroom.
- To provide followup consultation as necessary.

Through various methods such as lectures, small group activities, discussions and audiovisual aids, the task force suggest covering such topics as elementary school textbooks and other educational materials, career counseling, physical education, sex education and family life, teacher expectations and extracurricular activities.

THE GROUP ALSO proposed discussing "methodology for incorporating an awareness of human rights into the curriculum and development of action agendas for elimination of sex-stereotyping in the classroom" and resources and followup planning including review of materials available for teacher and student use.

Objectives set up by the group for the bookmobile include:

- To expose children to supplementary non-sexist materials and expand their concepts of role identity.
- To expose school staff to supplementary non-sexist materials and sources both for professional and personal growth.

Materials the group proposes including in the bookmobile are books, slides, films, audio-tapes and others "presenting people in positive fulfilling life roles."

THESE MATERIALS could more specifically include biographies of men and women, books portraying "non-traditional" careers for men and women, "more realistic fictional accounts of children and adults" and non-sexist games.

The school board has agreed to study the task force proposals and has directed the administration to do likewise.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said Friday no decision has been made on what action, if any, will be taken on the suggestions.

"It's too premature for me to say that's a way we want to go," Gill said. "But I think there's definitely room for inservice teacher training in those areas."

Couple threatened in mall parking lot; man charged

A Buffalo Grove man and his wife allegedly were harassed and threatened last Thursday at the Buffalo Grove Mall, 1300 W. Dundee Rd.

Police said Richard Clyburn, 775 Grove Dr., and his wife drove into the mall parking lot at about 5 p.m. and almost immediately were hit slightly by another automobile.

Clyburn exited his vehicle and went to talk to the driver of the other car when Raymond D. Smith left the second vehicle, shouting obscenities and brandishing a metal chain, police said. Clyburn ducked back into his car, which Smith then allegedly struck and damaged with the chain, police added.

Police said Mrs. Clyburn a short time later entered the Magic Touch Cleaners, only to be followed by Smith, who again was yelling obscenities. Inside the cleaners, Mrs. Clyburn allegedly slapped Smith across the face and Smith then had to be restrained by his companions, police reported.

Smith was charged with disorderly conduct and criminal damage to property in the incident, police said. He appeared Friday in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court where he was released on a personal recognizance bond rather than having to post the required $100. The case will be heard June 25 in the same court.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresgo, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, T.G.Y., Treaslers, McNaw and Nelsners.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfected.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take.

THE RAUPP MEMORIAL park site, an abandoned farm on Denham Lane in Lake County Buffalo Grove, is being called a dangerous hangout for local youngsters. The barn in the foreground no longer stands, but children play in a ramshackle shed and in the debris covering the site. Park officials say the site will be cleaned up this summer and work started on a museum and attached facility for community meetings and recreation.

Raupp park site becomes a 'hangout'

by JILL BETTNER

The Raupp Memorial park site on Denham Lane in the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove has apparently become a hangout for local youngsters and a hazard to their safety.

For the past several years the park district has been discussing development of the five-acre site that is part of the Raupp farm, one of the village's oldest landmarks. It was donated to the village on the condition that it would be made into a memorial.

Levitt and sons Inc. recently donated its old Stratmore sales office to the park district which is to be moved to the Raupp site for use as a museum. The park district also plans to build an addition to the building for community meetings and recreation.

PARK DIRECTOR Stan Crosland said Friday the park district hopes to move the sales office to the Raupp site and begin construction of the addition by August.

Meanwhile, the abandoned farm, overgrown with weeds and littered with beer cans and other debris, is being used as a place to play by younger children and a place to smoke and drink by teen-agers.

Only two large silos and a rundown shed remain of the farm buildings. A makeshift ladder up to a hole in the wall of the shed and words scribbled in orange paint inside indicate the shack is somebody's hideout.

Park, school and police officials all say they have received complaints from parents concerned that the park site is undesirable and unsafe for children.

"We've had some calls about it," Crosland said. "It is possible that with all the casual vandalism and damage, that it could present a hazardous situation. A kid could step on a rusty nail or fall climbing around or something."

Crosland said at various times youngsters have knocked out walls in the shed, pounded holes in the roof and done other destructive things. If it isn't possible to renovate the building and keep children out, he said, the park district plans to tear down the structure.

ONE WOMAN, WHO wished to remain anonymous, told The Herald last week she has seen teen-agers smoking at the Raupp site during their lunch hour and after school.

Ron Warwick, principal of nearby Twin Groves School, said he was aware that students sometimes go to the Raupp site instead of going home. He added that two truant students were caught at the site about two months ago.

Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh said patrolmen make frequent checks of the site, but to his knowledge, have never been able to catch youngsters there.

"If people see kids up there, why don't they call the police? That's what they should do instead of calling the newspaper," Walsh said. He added that the farm is public property and people have a right to be there.

Twin Groves School graduation June 11

Commencement exercises for the first eighth-grade class to graduate from the new Twin Groves School, Dist. 96, Buffalo Grove are scheduled for Tuesday, June 11.

The ceremonies are to begin at 8 p.m. at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View.

Awards and honors will be distributed to the class of 106 that will participate in the exercises.

The third school in Dist. 96, which serves the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove and Long Grove, Twin Groves opened last January.

Disease-carrying hamsters may have been sold in area

by LUISA GINETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn he may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID THE CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresgo, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, T.G.Y., Treaslers, McNaw and Nelsners.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfected.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take.

Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

Riders will have to find new way to work

Last run for Metron commuter bus

by KURT BAER

Some 100 commuters from Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove will have to find a different way to work today.

The men and women had been riders of Metron Systems shuttle bus to and from the Arlington Heights train station.

But the buses won't run today, or tomorrow, for an indefinite period after that. Metron made its last run Friday evening.

"I'm sad that it had to fail," said Thomas Fox, 810 E. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights.

Fox said he had ridden the bus every day last week and "thought it was excellent." He thinks more advertising might have cut the company's losses, which were amounting to $4,500 a month.

"I had a chance to really experience what these people had here, and I feel sorry for them now that it's over," he said.

ANOTHER RIDER, Joseph Good of 506 E. Knob Hill Dr., Arlington Heights, said he is going to have to depend on his wife to drive him to and from the station.

"It's going to be more of a burden on my wife, especially in the evening when it's prime time for a wife to be at home," he says.

Asked whether he would consider buying a second car to drive and park at the depot, Good had to say, "I guess it might be a good idea."

"I thought the bus service was great and I certainly would have liked to see it continued," he said.

A DECISION by the Arlington Heights village board not to subsidize bus operations at a cost of from $60,000 to $80,000 to the end of the year, brought Metron to the end of the line Friday.

"Metron is truly sorry to have to do this," company president Claude Luisada said in a farewell letter to his riders.

"Throughout our short term of service, it was the company's policy to render the best service we could, and, all things considered, I believe the customer received his money's worth," Luisada wrote.

MARTY JOYCE of Buffalo Grove said he got his money's worth since the Villa Verde apartment complex where he lives includes bus transportation to and from the train station as part of the rent.

"I'm going to move closer in," Joyce said. "The apartment managers have said they'll release people from the lease agreement if they can't provide bus transportation."

The complex is now considering buying a small van to take its commuter residents to the train station, Joyce said.

Lawrence Hilliard, 2612 N. Windsor Drive, Arlington Heights, has ridden Metron's bus since its first day of operation nine months ago.

"It's been very useful and I still feel the community could support a bus service," he said. But the basic problem, Hilliard recognizes, is simply the economics of it. "You need more utility of the buses to make it more profitable."

"More extensive research as to the need for the service and where that need lies might have helped," he said.

HILLIARD, LIKE most other Arlington Heights commuters, will now drive and park his car at the station now that the bus no longer runs.

In absolute terms, Metron's ridership was small — too small for a majority of Arlington Heights trustees to justify an infusion of village tax dollars.

The two buses, owned by the village, will be put in moth balls in case they can be used in some future village bus system.

"We sincerely thank you for your patronage," Luisada told his riders. "And if ever again we are able to operate, we hope you will once again ride with us."

He closed the letter with the optimistic words, "Until better times."

"I had a chance to really experience what these people had here, and I feel sorry for them now that it's over."

Auto 'fight' leads to speed chase, arrest

A 28-year-old River Grove man was sent to the hospital with scalp wounds after he was attacked by another motorist late Friday morning in Wheeling.

A spokesman for Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines said James Rohrlack was treated for the scalp cuts and then released from the hospital. His alleged attacker, Philip Burke, 45, of 7801A Bristol Ln., Hanover Park, was charged by police with aggravated battery, disorderly conduct and attempting to elude police. Wheeling Police Lt. Thomas Conte said Friday he expects more traffic charges to be lodged against Burke.

According to Conte, Burke or Rohrlack were driving in separate autos when one cut off the other about 11:30 a.m. near the U. S. Post Office, 250 W. Dundee Rd. A running conversation of insults and challenges apparently followed with the result that the two men started fighting near the intersection of Wolf and Dundee roads, police said.

Burke allegedly struck Rohrlack twice on the head with a jagged bar of steel during the fight, according to police.

CONTE SAID THREE Wheeling police cars then chased Burke at high speeds for about 12 miles, the chase ending northeast on Deerfield. Conte said Burke made a turn off Ill. Rte. 22 onto a dead-end road which led to his capture.

A passenger in Burke's car, William Harvey, 45, of Falmouth, Mass., was charged with disorderly conduct, aggravated battery and unlawful use of a weapon because he had a loaded .22 cal. semi-automatic pistol with him, Conte said.

Harvey told police he is a Falmouth policeman.

Six children to undergo treatment

Find rabid bat at Maryville

At least six Maryville Academy of Des Plaines students were to begin preventive treatment for rabies over the weekend after coming in contact with a bat found on the school grounds last week.

Des Plaines police said three of the youngsters 10, 10 and 12 years old, were bitten by the bat, later confirmed to be carrying the disease while another three were bitten or scratched.

The bat was found by a group of children near a chapel Tuesday afternoon and the animal, according to reports, was passed among several of the youths before it was turned over to a school nurse.

County rabies control authorities confirmed Thursday the animal was rabid

Conte said actually is a reserve officer with that police department.

Conte said Harvey told police he had the gun because he was carrying $1,500 as a partial payment on a gun collection that he was in this area to purchase.

and there was suspicion initially that as many as 35 Maryville students had come in contact with it.

School administrators called an assembly of their 323 students Friday afternoon and learned however that only six youngsters were bitten or scratched and would have to undergo treatment.

RABIES TREATMENT consists of a series of 14 shots administered every day or every other day and can take two weeks or more to complete.

Dr. Robert Keough, of the Cook County Animal Control Department said he was worried about the situation at first because of the bat's increasing importance over the years as a carrier of the disease.

He said Friday that bats and skunks,

High school teachers rally to negotiators

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 211 teachers will rally tonight to support their negotiating team now in salary contract talks with the district board of education.

Dan O'Brien, president of the Dist. 211 Education Assn., said teachers will gather at 7:15 p.m. in the Fremd High School gymnasium to discuss the board's offer of a 6.2 per cent increase in salary.

O'Brien said the association's negotiating team is asking for a 10 per cent increase in salary, which would raise the base pay for teachers from $9,950 to $10,950. Attendance at tonight's meeting will mean a vote of confidence for the bargaining team, said O'Brien. About 80 per cent of Dist. 211's 500 teachers are members of the education association.

THE MASS MEETING tonight is intended as a reaction to the board's "first, best and only offer," said O'Brien. He said the board's proposal for increased salary "will again put teachers in the position of losing to the cost of living."

Last year the teachers accepted a 4 per cent increase in salary, but according to the teacher's association, Dist. 211 teachers actually took about a 4.7 per cent pay cut because the consumer price index increased about 8.8 per cent last year.

O'Brien said the board members are arguing that they will spend $1.5 million more for teachers salaries next year even if teachers agree to the 6.2 per cent raise. But O'Brien said much of that money will be used to pay the salaries of 50 new teachers the board is hiring for next year.

"We contend that we are bargaining only for teachers on the staff now," said O'Brien. Growth in enrollment and additional teaching staff should be the board's problem, he said.

DIST. 211 BOARD Pres. Robert Creek, chairman of the board's negotiating committee, said Friday, "The district is limited in its income." He said that it is important to remember that any increase in the base pay for teachers is in addition to the 5.3 per cent salary increment teacher receive for additional experience until they reach the top of the scale after 15 years.

Creek said he has no idea when a settlement will be reached on teacher contracts for next year and will not be able to tell what effect the rally will have on negotiations until it is over. The next negotiating session between teachers and the board is scheduled for tomorrow night. The two sides have been negotiating since February.

The teachers negotiating team recently withdrew a proposal which would give teachers salary increases during the year based on the consumer price index. The team wanted teacher salaries raised during the year if the index rose more than one per cent per quarter.

In addition the board's negotiating committee withdrew a proposal for a multi-year contract.

O'Brien said teachers are still asking for an increase in health and life insurance, a binding arbitration agreement which would call in a third party if negotiations deadlock, and increases in summer school salaries and extracurricular pay.

Man, 31, arrested in tire-theft case

A 31-year-old Buffalo Grove man was charged with attempted theft after police said they caught him trying to put someone else's tire on his automobile last Thursday.

Police said Kenneth V. Holden, 705 Grove Dr., told them he had gotten a flat tire on his car and didn't have a spare. The tire came from a car owned by John C. Growcock, 156 Buffalo Grove Rd., police said.

The arrest was made about 2 a.m. in the parking lot at 154 Buffalo Grove Rd., after police had responded to a call of a man jacking up a car in the lot. Holden was released after posting $100 bond. He will appear July 2 in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Burglar makes haul at gas station

Eleven cases of motor oil, an electric calculator and $10 cash were stolen early Thursday from the Clark gas station, 310 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling police said Friday.

Police said the station front door was kicked in and a lock was pryed off a storage shed between 12:30 and 12:58 a.m. The loss was estimated at $175.

Alderman won't block Superblock in crucial vote

Ald. George Olen (2nd) has apparently decided against attempting to block approval of a key measure needed to allow construction of the proposed $12 million Superblock project.

While Olen has publicly stated that he has not made up his mind on how he will vote on the proposal to vacate a portion of Center Street to make way for Superblock, several city officials said Friday Olen will probably vote in favor of the measure.

"I certainly don't feel I have the right to stop the whole project," Olen said Friday. His vote on the Center Street issue is seen as a key factor in the progress of the redevelopment project. The city council must approve the vacation of all streets by at least a three-fourths majority. At least three aldermen and possibly four other aldermen will vote against the measure.

Olen has met with Mayor Herbert Behr twice in the last 10 days to discuss the matter. While complete details of the meetings have not been released, Olen said he has made a number of suggestions regarding proposals which might alleviate traffic congestion around the St. Mary and Central schools area, south of the Superblock site.

OLEN HAS met several times with residents from the two schools and others who have formed a coalition known as Citizens for a Common Good.

Most of the persons in that organization have said they are not opposed to the redevelopment project, but are interested in lessening traffic congestion which might be generated by the project.

The group has planned a rally on June 9 at the West Park Field House on Wolf Road to gather support for a petition drive they are sponsoring.

Most of the people who have joined the committee have voiced concern over traffic problems which might develop from future phases of the redevelopment program.

Olen said Behr has agreed that a detailed traffic study will be conducted once the Superblock building is finished to determine traffic flow. Behr said last week that most traffic experts cannot predict in advance how traffic will flow before a project is finished.

HE ALSO STATED that a fence will be built along athletic fields near Central School to eliminate the possibility of hazard to children in the area.

Olen said the developers would pay for the fencing.

Final action on the vacation of Center Street is not expected for at least two weeks.

Schools' closing date may be changed—again

A proposal to shorten the present school year by yet another day and the possible awarding of a bid to repair heating and ventilation systems at two Dist. 59 schools will face the Elk Grove Township School board at its regular meeting tonight.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

The Dist. 59 administration has recommended the board change the last day of school for the 1973-74 year from Monday, June 17, to Friday, June 14. If approved, the school closing date would be changed for the third time this school year.

School originally was scheduled to end June 14. However, the board, at the suggestion of teachers, extended Christmas vacation two days to conserve energy in the form of heating. The two days were added to the school year, putting the closing date at June 18.

THE BOARD LATER authorized changing the closing date to June 17, since the district had used only two of three "snow days" to close down during bad winter weather.

According to Supt. James Ervitt, many in the district had complained that it was impractical to open up school Monday for such a short time. District students attend school for a little over an hour in the morning on the last day of school to pick up report cards.

Also on the board agenda are requests to award bids for milk, uniforms and mops for the coming school year along with carpeting for Devonshire, Hopkins, Rupley and Einstein schools plus a bid for the repair of heating systems and Byrd School in Elk Grove Village and John Jay School in Mount Prospect.

ONLY ONE COMPANY entered a bid for the project which is expected to improve not only heating, but ventilation in the schools during warm months of the year. Calls to bid were sent to five companies, said Adolph Danta, director of buildings and grounds for the district.

The bidder, Johnson Service Co., submitted a bid of $8,440 to do the work. Fluid Engineering Co., which did the original survey of the job and recommended possible solutions, is a subsidiary of Johnson Service Co. The board is expected to approve the bid.

Also on the agenda is a report on insurance for personal property in district school buildings. The district started to investigate possible personal property insurance following a complaint from a parent whose child's musical instrument was stolen from school. At the present time, the district carries no insurance which would cover the loss.

LEARNING GAMES take on a new attraction when the materials are handmade by the teacher. South School students Brady Sartin, left, Linda Piekars and Pam Nelson work on an experiment developed by their teacher at a Hyde Park resource center. Maine Township teachers are planning to open a local workshop.

Teachers plan center for ideas

by LINDA PUNCH

For 1½ years, Maine Township teachers have traveled to Hyde Park to work on "do-it-yourself" educational projects at a teacher-sponsored resource center.

Patterned after centers in England where teachers gather to exchange ideas and develop new learning materials, the Hyde Park facility gained a following among local teachers. Now Maine Township teachers are making plans to begin a local center of their own.

"The concept is to develop a physical facility organized and run by teachers," Dennis Anderson, president-elect of the Des Plaines Education Assn., said. "It would be a place teachers could meet to discuss upgrading of educational performance and curriculum development and to exchange ideas."

WHILE THERE are teacher resource centers throughout the country, Anderson noted that most are "usually initiated by school administrators, school boards and universities."

"They're basically pre-service facilities for training prospective teachers," he said.

One of the big attractions of the Hyde Park center is that teachers can make their own learning materials at cost, according to Anderson. Des Plaines teachers who have visited the center have come back with handmade projects ranging from drywall reading tables and study carrels to educational games.

The DPEA official said teachers need at least $100,000 to begin setting up the local center. A committee of township teacher representatives is currently researching financial grants and looking for storefront locations.

Thomas Powers Hopkins principal

Thomas H. Powers, a former Dist. 59 principal who has been on sabbatical leave for the past year, has been named principal at Mark Hopkins School in Elk Grove Village.

Powers, who received a bachelor's degree in 1960 and a master's degree in 1965 from DePaul University in Chicago, has been with the Elk Grove Township school district since 1968. He's previously served as principal at High Ridge Knolls School in Des Plaines and Dempster Junior High School in Mount Prospect.

Six children to undergo treatment

Find rabid bat at Maryville

At least six Maryville Academy of Des Plaines students were to begin preventive treatment for rabies over the weekend after coming in contact with a bat found on the school grounds last week.

Des Plaines police said three of the youngsters 10, 10 and 12 years old, were bitten by the bat, later confirmed to be carrying the disease while another three were bitten or scratched.

The bat was found by a group of children near a chapel Tuesday afternoon and the animal, according to reports, was passed among several of the youths before it was turned over to a school nurse.

County rabies control authorities confirmed Thursday the animal was rabid and there was suspicion initially that as many as 35 Maryville students had come in contact with it.

School administrators called an assembly of their 323 students Friday afternoon and learned however that only six youngsters were bitten or scratched and would have to undergo treatment.

RABIES TREATMENT consists of a series of 14 shots administered every day or every other day and can take two weeks or more to complete.

Dr. Robert Keough, of the Cook County Animal Control Department said he was worried about the situation at first because of the bat's increasing importance over the years as a carrier of the disease.

He said Friday that bats and skunks, "are primary carriers of rabies." The disease is normally transmitted through the animal's saliva into the person's nervous system when it bites or scratches someone.

Resident charged in shoplifting case

A Des Plaines man was arrested after police said he walked out of the K-Mart store, 1155 Oakton St., without paying for two flashlights and a pair of golf gloves worth $9.48.

Des Plaines police said Friday that Edward Price, 20, of 964 Woodlawn, was turned over to them Thursday after store

KEOUGH, HOWEVER, mentioned recent tests that have shown bats to be able to communicate the disease "airborne," or through the air, without anyone being bitten or scratched.

Two research workers died of rabies once after having been in a cave with a large number of bats, even though they were not bitten.

Keough said parents should advise their children, "never to handle sick animals but to call the local police for advice."

Disease-carrying hamsters may have been sold in area

by LUISA GINETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn he may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID THE CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresge, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, Grant, T.G.Y., Treasurers, McNaw and Neisners.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfectant.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take.

Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

City's support sought

Changes in rent-subsidy plan asked

Des Plaines officials will be asked Monday to support an effort by the Cook County Housing Authority to obtain revisions in regulations governing a federally-funded rent-subsidy program.

Ald. George Olen (2nd) said Friday he will seek city council approval to support the move, which seeks to increase fair market rental rates for existing housing under the Section 23 leasing program.

Several city officials have expressed interest in the program, which provides rent subsidies for low- and moderate-income families living in privately owned apartments, as a means of providing additional housing in Des Plaines.

NEW REGULATIONS released by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development show rental rates for new construction projects are considered in line with current prices.

However, the rates for existing housing which range between $137 to $185 for one-to three-bedroom apartments, have been considered too low to meet rental rates. Olen said Victor Walchick, executive director of the Cook County Housing Authority, has already stated a desire to boost those rates.

He added that the city is still awaiting the complete details of the leasing program. It is expected the city council will refer the complete program to the housing commission for a detailed review.

Housing commission members have voiced concerns that they were being bypassed in the consideration of the rent subsidy program.

Olen said the commission would study the program to determine if the city should become involved and how many units they should seek to obtain for low- and moderate-income housing.

June 14 to be last day now?

School year's closing date may be changed once again

A proposal to shorten the present school year by yet another day and the possible awarding of a bid to repair heating and ventilation systems at two Dist. 59 schools will face the Elk Grove Township School board at its regular meeting tonight.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

The Dist. 59 administration has recommended the board change the last day of school for the 1973-74 year from Monday, June 17, to Friday, June 14. If approved, the school closing date would be changed for the third time this school year.

School originally was scheduled to end June 14. However, the board, at the suggestion of teachers, extended Christmas vacation two days to conserve energy in the form of heating. The two days were added to the school year, putting the closing date at June 18.

THE BOARD LATER authorized changing the closing date to June 17, since the district had used only two of three "snow days" to close down during bad winter weather.

According to Supt. James Ervill, many in the district had complained that it was impractical to open up school Monday for such a short time. District students attend school for a little over an hour in the morning on the last day of school to pick up report cards.

Also on the board agenda are requests to award bids for milk, uniforms and mops for the coming school year along with carpeting for Devonshire, Hopkins, Rupley and Einstein schools plus a bid for the repair of heating systems and Byrd School in Elk Grove Village and John Jay School in Mount Prospect.

ONLY ONE COMPANY entered a bid for the project which is expected to improve not only heating, but ventilation in the schools during warm months of the year. Calls to bid were sent to five companies, said Adolph Danta, director of buildings and grounds for the district.

The bidder, Johnson Service Co., submitted a bid of $8,440 to do the work. Fluid Engineering Co., which did the original survey of the job and recommended possible solutions, is a subsidiary of Johnson Service Co. The board is expected to approve the bid.

Also on the agenda is a report on insurance for personal property in district school buildings. The district started to investigate possible personal property insurance following a complaint from a parent whose child's musical instrument was stolen from school. At the present time, the district carries no insurance which would cover the loss.

Chicagoan arrested for theft

A 33-year-old Chicago man was arrested after he reportedly stole eight auto tires from a Chicago and North Western Ry. boxcar near a factory in Elk Grove Village where he was working.

The man, identified as Robert Perkins, 7153 Rhodes, Chicago, was arrested on his job at the Arden Press printing plant, 2006 Arthur, Wednesday.

Police said they found some of the tires in an auto in the company parking lot and traced the car to Perkins.

ACCORDING TO reports, police were responding to a call from a worker at the plant who noticed the boxcar door open. When police arrived, an unidentified man was seen rolling one of the tires between two autos in the parking lot.

When he discovered police were there, the man reportedly dumped the tire in a swampy area and ran off into the factory and could not be found.

A search of the area turned up several tires in the swampy area and three more were found in the Perkins' auto.

A plant foreman was informed of the police discovery and pointed out Perkins, who was taken into custody. Five other tires were later found in his auto, according to reports.

Police said Perkins later admitted to the theft of $360 in tires.

He was freed on $1,000 bond and has been scheduled to appear in the Elk Grove Village branch of Cook County Circuit Court June 19 on theft charges.

Director of unit-district study may keep his money

by JUDY JOBBITT

Ralph Belnap, director of the controversial unit-district study for Schaumburg Township schools, still may keep the money he wants to give back to the district study committee.

Last week Belnap returned the $4,750 paid him for his report because no one seemed satisfied with the unit district study.

But a member of the committee that funded the report said an informal poll of committee members shows they want to convince Belnap to keep the money, a source, who refused to be identified, said.

THE COMMITTEE probably will not meet to discuss what should be done with the returned money, added the source. Other members said he has the right to the money because "it's money already spent" on costs incurred by the Northern Illinois University team that conducted it under Belnap.

Belnap returned the fee along with a letter explaining his position about the study. The letter was received by James Blankenship, vice chairman of the committee, last week.

Blankenship refused to comment on the letter stating it will be disclosed at the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 school board meeting June 6.

Belnap said he is standing behind his report because it presents what he found and recommendations he believes in.

CONTROVERSY AROSE about the report when a committee of 10 citizens formed to circulate petitions for a Schaumburg area unit district, one of the recommended districts in the report.

The petition was formed on Belnap's suggestion, said a committee member.

When Belnap presented the final draft of the report to the committee, he said he did not realize the tax base Dist. 54 could lose if Rolling Meadows formed a unit district incorporating part of Schaumburg Township.

At that time, Belnap said a petition to protect Schaumburg's tax base "probably would not hurt," said the source.

THE FINAL DRAFT also included maps that delineated the various unit districts recommended in the study. Besides the Schaumburg area unit district, unit districts were recommended for Palatine and Inverness, and Hoffman Estates and Rolling Meadows.

The committee requested the maps be removed from the final report made public May 10. They feared the maps would make it too easy for another area, particularly Rolling Meadows, to circulate petitions for a unit district of its own, said Blankenship.

The petition committee feared Rolling Meadows could petition for a unit district and incorporate Walden and Motorola into the district's tax base.

Although more than 600 signatures have been obtained on the petitions, the committee does not intend to file them with the Cook County school superintendent. Signatures from 200 citizens are required to file a unit district petition.

The committee will only file the petitions if a threat arises, said Blankenship.

Salary talks spur teachers to rally

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 211 teachers will rally tonight to support their negotiating team now in salary contract talks with the district board of education.

Dan O'Brien, president of the Dist. 211 Education Assn., said teachers will gather at 7:15 p.m. in the Fremd High School gymnasium to discuss the board's offer of a 6.2 per cent increase in salary.

O'Brien said the association's negotiating team is asking for a 10 per cent increase in salary, which would raise the base pay for teachers from $8,950 to $9,850. Attendance at tonight's meeting will mean a vote of confidence for the bargaining team, said O'Brien. About 80 per cent of Dist. 211's 500 teachers are members of the education association.

THE MASS MEETING tonight is intended as a reaction to the board's "first, best and only offer," said O'Brien. He said the board's proposal for increased salary "will again put teachers in the position of losing to the cost of living."

Last year the teachers accepted a 4 per cent increase in salary, but according to the teacher's association, Dist. 211 teachers actually took about a 4.7 per cent pay cut because the consumer price index increased about 8.8 per cent last year.

O'Brien said the board members are arguing that they will spend $1.5 million more for teachers salaries next year even if teachers agree to the 6.2 per cent raise. But O'Brien said much of that money will be used to pay the salaries of 50 new teachers the board is hiring for next year.

"We contend that we are bargaining only for teachers on the staff now," said O'Brien. Growth in enrollment and additional teaching staff should be the board's problem, he said.

DIST. 211 BOARD Pres. Robert Creek, chairman of the board's negotiating committee, said Friday, "The district is limited in its income." He said that it is important to remember that any increase in the base pay for teachers is in addition to the 5.3 per cent salary increment teacher receive for additional experience until they reach the top of the scale after 16 years.

Creek said he has no idea when a settlement will be reached on teacher contracts for next year and will not be able to tell what effect the rally will have on negotiations until it is over. The next negotiating session between teachers and the board is scheduled for tomorrow night. The two sides have been negotiating since February.

The teachers negotiating team recently withdrew a proposal which would give teachers salary increases during the year based on the consumer price index. The team wanted teacher salaries raised during the year if the index rose more than one per cent per quarter.

In addition the board's negotiating committee withdrew a proposal for a multi-year contract.

O'Brien said teachers are still asking for an increase in health and life insurance, a binding arbitration agreement which would call in a third party if negotiations deadlock, and increases in summer school salaries and extracurricular pay.

Disease-carrying hamsters may have been sold in area

by LUISA GINETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn he may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID THE CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworths, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresge, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Schultz, Grant, T.G.Y., Tresslers, McNaw and Neisners.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfectant.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take. Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

Alice in wonderland

Lively Junior High School math teacher proud of 'Representative' award from her colleagues

by BOB GALLAS

In these days when awards to teachers are plentiful, Alice Ekstrom is particularly proud of her recent award as "Representative Teacher" in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59. She values the honor because it comes from a group she's particularly proud of — her fellow teachers.

Sponsored by the Dist. 59 Teachers

Council, the award was started this year to give teachers in the district a chance to honor their fellow educators.

Mrs. Ekstrom's career in Dist. 59 began in 1960, just a few years after she started teaching, at the old Higgins Junior High School, which once stood near the intersection of Higgins and Landmeier roads. She later moved to Dempster Junior High School and finally to Lively Junior High School, where she has been since 1969.

A MATHEMATICS teacher, Mrs. Ekstrom says she considers herself a "strict" teacher, perhaps because of the nature of her subject, an exact science.

Mrs. Ekstrom, who has been a resident of Elk Grove Village since 1958, said her responsibility goes further than simply "teaching math." "You have to make the subject challenging and enjoyable, trying not only to prepare the students for next year, but to instill good character as well."

Comparing her eighth graders today with those she had 14 years ago, Mrs. Ekstrom says the main difference is the adding maturity and worldliness of young teenagers.

She estimates that she's taught close to 3,000 students during her years of teaching which started in the inner city of Chicago, trying all the time to adhere to one important element of her teaching philosophy — fairness and consistency.

A GRADUATE OF Rosary College in River Forest, Mrs. Ekstrom never really intended to become a math teacher. "When I came to the district they needed a math teacher so I offered," said Mrs. Ekstrom.

She's presently working on her master's degree, now that her two daughters are in high school.

Despite her claim to being a strict teacher, Mrs. Ekstrom admits she does become quite attached to many of her students. "You never let them know it to the last week of school, though,"

PREPARING FOR another math class is Alice Ekstrom, a Dist. 59 teacher named "Representative Teacher" in the district by fellow teachers.

Suspect charged in January TV theft

Elk Grove Village police have charged a Posen man with the theft last January of a television set from a Holiday Inn at 1000 Busse Rd., Elk Grove Village.

In custody Friday in DuPage County Jail was Kurt J. Bump, 24, of 14523 Kedzie. He was arrested Wednesday by Elk Grove Village police.

According to reports, Bump checked into a room at the Holiday Inn Jan. 5 and stole the set after dismantling it. Police managed to trace him through the name on the motel register.

Bump was being held on $3,000 bond and has been scheduled to appear June 15, in DuPage County Circuit Court.

Auto wheels stolen

Thieves stole two wheels from an auto owned by Frank Novy, 616 Carol Square, according to Elk Grove Village police reports. The wheels, valued at $160, were reported stolen when the auto was left outside Novy's apartment late Wednesday or early Thursday.

Resident charged in shoplifting case

A Des Plaines man was arrested after police said he walked out of the K-Mart store, 1155 Oakton St., without paying for two flashlights and a pair of golf gloves worth $9.48.

Des Plaines police said Friday that Edward Price, 20, of 964 Woodlawn, was turned over to them Thursday after store security agents said they saw him steal the items.

According to reports, Price bought and paid for a hat in the store and agents saw two unidentified youths put the golf gloves and flashlights in the bag.

Police charged him with theft and he has been scheduled to appear July 18, the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Train teachers as 'non-sexists': parents' group

by JILL BETTNER

A School Dist. 21 parent group has asked the school board to provide teacher training aimed at eliminating sexual bias in the classroom.

The Citizens Task Force on Education, headed by Judy Brady-Keller and Carol Wrabl of Arlington Heights, last week requested the board to set up the training and offered to assist in conducting workshops or other sessions. The task force is a self-appointed group and was not organized by the school board.

In addition to the teacher training, the group also has proposed the creation of a bookmobile to circulate non-sexist materials around Dist. 21 schools enabling teachers to supplement textbooks already in use.

THE GROUP CONDUCTED a survey of educational materials used in Dist. 21 about two months ago and concluded that many contain and/or stereotyped sex roles.

Following the survey, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of the objectionable materials. In response, the board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.

The proposals for teacher training and a bookmobile are two of the parent group's ideas for implementing the board policy.

A PROPOSED OUTLINE for the teacher training program drawn up by the task force lists the objectives of the training as:

- To enable participants to gain an awareness of the manifestations of sex stereotyping in education and its implications for the future.
- To offer methods whereby school personnel can develop their own strategies for eliminating sex discrimination in the classroom.
- To provide followup consultation as necessary.

Through various methods such as lectures, small group activities, discussions and audiovisual aids, the task force suggests covering such topics as elementary school textbooks and other educational materials, career counseling, physical education, sex education and family life, teacher expectations and extracurricular activities.

THE GROUP ALSO proposed discussing "methodology for incorporating an awareness of human rights into the curriculum and development of action agendas for elimination of sex-stereotyping in the classroom" and resources and followup planning including review of materials available for teacher and student use.

Objectives set up by the group for the bookmobile include:

- To expose children to supplementary non-sexist materials and expand their concepts of role identity.
- To expose school staff to supplementary non-sexist materials and sources both for professional and personal growth.

Materials the group proposes including in the bookmobile are books, slides, films, audio-tapes and others "presenting people in positive fulfilling life roles."

THESE MATERIALS could more specifically include biographies of men and women, books portraying "non-traditional" careers for men and women, "more realistic fictional accounts of children and adults" and non-sexist games.

The school board has agreed to study the task force proposals and has directed the administration to do likewise.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said Friday no decision has been made on what action, if any, will be taken on the suggestions.

"It's too premature for me to say that's a way we want to go," Gill said. "But I think there's definitely room for inservice teacher training in those areas."

In zoning bribery scandal

Peskin sentenced to 3-year jail term

by NANCY COWGER

Bernard M. Peskin, "the fixer" in the Hoffman Estates Kaufman and Broad zoning bribery scandal, was sentenced to three years in a federal prison Friday by U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr.

McGarr set Aug. 8 for Peskin to surrender to Chicago Federal marshals and begin serving his sentence, but he noted Peskin's intention to appeal his conviction. The surrender date can be extended, pending the appeal, McGarr said.

McGarr said he intentionally set a longer prison term for Peskin that he had given any of the six former Hoffman Estates officials who pleaded guilty in the zoning bribery scheme. "That was not accidental. His culpability is greater," said McGarr.

PESKIN WAS convicted April 4 by a federal jury of five counts of bribery, one of conspiracy and one of tax evasion stemming from passing $35,000 in bribes from Kaufman and Broad to village officials in 1968.

McGarr said both on these village officials, and on Kaufman and Broad, before pronouncing sentence.

"Not all public officials were venal and corrupt" in Hoffman Estates in 1968, "but the majority were," said McGarr, referring to "ethical conditions in that village at that time."

"It was a black day for the citizens of Hoffman Estates when the corrupt influence of Kaufman and Broad first insinuated itself into village affairs," he said. McGarr noted Kaufman and Broad had pleaded guilty and had received the maximum fine for the charges it faced, $50,000. "But the frustrating fact is that does not harm or hardly even touch the anonymous men behind the corporation," he said.

PESKIN PLEADED for leniency in sentencing, citing his health and background as considerations in his favor. His physician, Dr. Nicholas Capos, described surgery he performed on Peskin for cancer in 1971, and said patients with Peskin's condition have a 30 per cent survival rate over five years.

"This man is on borrowed time. Sending this man away would be inhumane treatment," said Capos.

Peskin's attorney, Thomas P. Sullivan, cited Peskin's accomplishments as a state representative and his charitable and civic contributions in seeking probation for Peskin, rather than a prison sentence.

BUT ASSISTANT U.S. Atty. Anton Valukas, the prosecutor, responded, "Peskin was not a virgin," and said in spite of his "impressive background" Peskin "did what he did not out of necessity but out of greed."

"Peskin was a fixer — one of a particular breed of lawyers we see in Chicago," said Valukas, adding, "It is because of persons like Peskin that the bribery system continues."

Man, 31, arrested in tire-theft case

A 31-year-old Buffalo Grove man was charged with attempted theft after police said they caught him trying to put someone else's tire on his automobile last Thursday.

Police said Kenneth V. Holden, 705 Grove Dr., told them he had gotten a flat tire on his car and didn't have a spare. The tire came from a car owned by John C. Grovercock, 156 Buffalo Grove Rd., police said.

The arrest was made about 2 a.m. in the parking lot at 154 Buffalo Grove Rd., after police had responded to a call of a man jacking up a car in the lot. Holden was released after posting $100 bond. He will appear July 2 in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

"If the system (of government) is to survive, if people are to believe when they go before a public body that they'll get a fair hearing — nothing more, nothing less — people like Peskin must be put out of business," Valukas said.

McGarr noted he would not entertain motions by the government to add a fine to the sentence.

But McGarr consented to accept a government motion asking the court to charge Peskin the total cost of his trial. Valukas said the dollar amount has not yet been computed.

Vandals hit school

Vandals caused $75 damage at Salt Creek School, 63 Kennedy Blvd., after defacing a plexiglass window by holding a flame up to it, said Elk Grove Village Police.

The damage was discovered by a village patrolman in the area late Wednesday.

TAMMY, THE monkey, and Michael Suarez, 9, of 300 S. Lancaster St., Mount Prospect, were reunited late last Thursday. The squirrel monkey had been living in neighborhood trees since his escape last Monday.

High school teachers rally to negotiators

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 211 teachers will rally tonight to support their negotiating team now in salary contract talks with the district board of education.

Dan O'Brien, president of the Dist. 211 Education Assn., said teachers will gather at 7:15 p.m. in the Fremd High School gymnasium to discuss the board's offer of a 8.2 per cent increase in salary.

O'Brien said the association's negotiating team is asking for a 10 per cent increase in salary, which would raise the base pay for teachers from $8,650 to $9,510. Attendance at tonight's meeting will mean a vote of confidence for the bargaining team, said O'Brien. About 80 per cent of Dist. 211's 500 teachers are members of the education association.

THE MASS MEETING tonight is intended as a reaction to the board's "first, best and only offer," said O'Brien. He said the board's proposal for increased salary "will again put teachers in the position of losing to the cost of living."

Last year the teachers accepted a 4 per cent increase in salary, but according to the teacher's association, Dist. 211 teachers actually took about a 4.7 per cent pay cut because the consumer price index increased about 8.6 per cent last year.

O'Brien said the board members are arguing that they will spend $1.5 million more for teachers salaries next year even if teachers agree to the 8.2 per cent raise. But O'Brien said much of that money will be used to pay the salaries of 50 new teachers the board is hiring for next year.

"We contend that we are bargaining only for teachers on the staff now," said O'Brien. Growth in enrollment and additional teaching staff should be the board's problem, he said.

DIST. 211 BOARD Pres. Robert Creek, chairman of the board's negotiating committee, said Friday, "The district is limited in its income." He said that it is important to remember that any increase in the base pay for teachers is in addition to the 5.3 per cent salary increment teacher receive for additional experience until they reach the top of the scale after 15 years.

Creek said he has no idea when a settlement will be reached on teacher contracts for next year and will not be able to tell what effect the rally will have on negotiations until it is over. The next negotiating session between teachers and the board is scheduled for tomorrow night. The two sides have been negotiating since February.

Grade-school teacher pact talks to drag?

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 teacher salary talks probably will continue into the summer, according to Tom Kelley, spokesman for the teacher negotiating team.

Dist. 15 is not the only area school district facing a late teacher-pay settlement. Of eight area school districts, only four have settled the salary question for the coming school year and in two of those, teachers are in the middle of a three-year contract. Districts 23, 25, 57 and 211 have not settled their salary questions.

"We hope to have a contract settlement before school starts (next fall)," he added. No agreement has been reached on salary items or working conditions, to date, but some of the more technical matters have been settled, Kelley added.

Negotiations last year ended in October, after six months of meeting and two months of protest activities by Dist. 15 teachers. Talks had been suspended over the summer so that teachers could study the financial status of the school district, officials said last year.

WHEN TALKS resumed in September, teachers refused a temporary 6 per cent pay raise, saying they wanted to settle salaries in one package. That unsuccessful negotiating session touched off a series of leafleting, picketing and a protest march. No strikes were officially considered, but teachers, in their petition, did ask the board to reach a quick settlement "to avoid any disruption of the educational function of the school district."

Teachers and the board finally settled on an average 8.7 per cent pay raise, which included both the annual increase given automatically as teachers gain another year's experience and an approximate 5 per cent cost-of-living increase. The raise brought the base salary up from $7,730 to $8,250 for a beginning teacher with a bachelor's and no experience. The highest salary is $18,306. The previous year's highest salary was $14,937.

NEGOTIATIONS for the coming school year started around the beginning of April. The fourth session was held last Thursday, when teachers presented a salary package to the board negotiating team, Kelley said. The board team said they would present their package to teacher negotiators before the next meeting, June 6, according to Kelley. Details of either package are not available.

Ethics ordinance may be to blame

Real estate broker off zoning board

Thomas LaDore is no longer a member of the Palatine Zoning Board of Appeals, although it's unclear whether he resigned first or was removed by Village Pres. Wendell Jones.

Jones announced Friday that he had notified the local real estate broker that he would be replaced by a successor tonight at the village board meeting. "I don't need his resignation. His term expired May 1," Jones said. LaDore said Friday that he had sent his resignation to Jones Wednesday in protest over the ethics ordinance adopted by the village board Tuesday.

"I decided to resign right after they passed the ordinance," LaDore said. He has been a severe critic of the ethics ordinance since its inception.

JONES SAID Friday that he had decided to remove LaDore before discussion of ethics legislation began, in an effort to get new people involved on the village boards.

LaDore's replacement, Evellene Stenzel, is expected to be appointed at today's village board meeting at the Slade Street Fire Station, 117 W. Slade St., starting at 9 p.m.

John Nelson, a 17-year veteran of the zoning board and a Palatine broker, said Friday he may consider resigning from the board if the new restrictions leave him open to fines and penalties from unwritten violations.

"If I see that I can be innocently involved at a later date, I wouldn't take the change," Nelson said. He is planning to review the ordinance to determine how severe the restrictions would be.

Like several other local brokers, Nelson said he believes the village board may be making a mistake by making it difficult for real estate brokers to serve on the village zoning and planning bodies.

"There should be real estate brokers on all three boards because of their professionalism and knowledge," Nelson said.

VILLAGE TRUSTEES approved the ethics ordinance that would require real estate agents on the village zoning board and plan commission to sign annual affidavits that they will not accept compensation on any property for one year after their board takes action on the land. The ordinance is designed to eliminate conflicts of interest for brokers who might represent clients who come before one of the boards.

Violation of the ordinance could mean removal from the board, coupled with revoking the brokers license and a $500 fine.

Miss Stenzel, who will replace LaDore on the zoning board, is president of the Arlington Crest Homeowners Assn. and runs a Montessori School for preschoolers in Palatine.

Planners may fill vacancies

Peter Nance and Donald Payton are expected to be appointed to fill two vacancies on the Palatine Plan Commission tonight.

Nance, 750 E. Morris Dr., is personnel manager of the Urban Investment and Development Company of Chicago. He will fill the position left open by Loren Miller.

The most recent vacancy, caused by Tom Moody's resignation last month, will be filled by Payton, 311 N. Carter St. Payton, 24, is director of manpower planning for the DuPage County Plan Commission and an active Republican.

Moody, long-time chairman of the plan commission, resigned at the village board's request, after the board cited a possible conflict of interest between Moody's appointed position and his work as an engineer in Palatine.

3-year jail sentence for Peskin

by NANCY COWGER

Bernard M. Peskin, "the fixer" in the Hoffman Estates Kaufman and Broad zoning bribery scandal, was sentenced to three years in a federal prison Friday by U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr.

McGarr noted Kaufman and Broad had pleaded guilty and had received the maximum fine for the charges it faced, $50,000. "But the frustrating fact is that does not harm or hardly even touch the anonymous men behind the corporation," he said.

PESKIN PLEADED for leniency in sentencing, citing his health and background as considerations in his favor. His physician, Dr. Nicholas Capos, described surgery he performed on Peskin for cancer in 1971, and said patients with Peskin's condition have a 30 per cent survival rate over five years.

"This man is on borrowed time. Sending this man away would be inhumane treatment," said Capos.

Peskin's attorney, Thomas P. Sullivan, cited Peskin's accomplishments as a state representative and his charitable and civic contributions in seeking probation for Peskin, rather than a prison sentence.

BUT ASSISTANT U.S. Atty. Anton Valukas, the prosecutor, responded, "Peskin was not a virgin," and said in spite of his "impressive background" Peskin "did what he did not out of necessity but out of greed."

"Peskin was a fixer — one of a particular breed of lawyers we see in Chicago," said Valukas, adding, "It is because of persons like Peskin that the bribery system continues."

"If the system (of government) is to survive, if people are to believe when they go before a public body that they'll get a fair hearing — nothing more, nothing less — people like Peskin must be put out of business," Valukas said.

McGarr noted he would not entertain motions by the government to add a fine to the sentence.

But McGarr consented to accept a government motion asking the court to charge Peskin the total cost of his trial. Valukas said the dollar amount has not yet been computed.

County rabies control authorities confirmed Thursday the animal was rabid and there was suspicion initially that as many as 35 Maryville students had come in contact with it.

School administrators called an assembly of their 323 students Friday afternoon and learned however that only six youngsters were bitten or scratched and would have to undergo treatment.

RABIES TREATMENT consists of a series of 14 shots administered every day or every other day and can take two weeks or more to complete.

Dr. Robert Keough, of the Cook County Animal Control Department said he was worried about the situation at first because of the bat's increasing importance over the years as a carrier of the disease.

He said Friday that bats and skunks, "are primary carriers of rabies." The disease is normally transmitted through the animal's saliva into the person's nervous system when it bites or scratches someone.

KEOUGH, HOWEVER, mentioned recent tests that have shown bats to be able to communicate the disease "airborne," or through the air, without anyone being bitten or scratched.

Two research workers died of rabies once after having been in a cave with a large number of bats, even though they were not bitten.

Keough said parents should advise

"We would like to get across other things," he added, "other than salary and fringe benefits." The other things include working conditions, which Kelley refused to define specifically.

In other school districts, working conditions have included grievance procedures, class size, staff reductions, teacher evaluations and pupil discipline.

"Steady progress has been made," said Supt. Frank Whiteley, spokesman for the board's negotiating team.

Three injured in traffic accidents

Three Palatine residents were taken to Northwest Community Hospital Saturday afternoon by Palatine fire ambulances for injuries sustained in separate accidents.

Twelve-year-old Robert J. Vechiola of 135 E. Norman Dr. was struck by an auto driven by James F. Campeau of 1010 Sterling Dr., Palatine.

Vechiola was riding on the wrong side of the road, police said. No charges were filed.

Daniel Kulas, 14, of 703 N. Franklin, fell off his bicycle near Greeley and Wilson streets in Palatine, and suffered loss of memory and lacerations, Palatine police said.

Palatine police charged Richard Boyton of 301 N. Rohlwing Rd. for failure to give signal after the car he was driving struck Michael R. Deutsch, 20.

Boyton was eastbound on Tahoe Terrace near McArthur Drive and gave signal to turn right onto McArthur Drive.

Deutsch, riding on a motorcycle, attempted to pass Boyton on the left, police said. Boyton apparently changed his mind and proceeded to make a left hand turn and struck Deutsch, according to police reports.

Fifth grader wins poster contest

Andrew Ayers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brad C. Ayers, 1053 E. Sayles Dr., Palatine, was selected last week as one of eight winners in the 1974 Northern Illinois Gas Co. school poster contest.

Andrew's entry was selected from more than 7,000 posters submitted by third through fifth graders in the regions served by Northern Illinois Gas Co. His poster featured a water faucet with the warning, "Don't Let America Run Out."

Andrew is a fifth grade student at Winston Park School.

Opinions mixed on annexation of Philippe subdivision

by TONI GINETTI
A planned city council action June 11 to annex to Rolling Meadows the Philippe subdivision, an unincorporated area northwest of the city, has drawn mixed reactions from homeowners living in the area.

The subdivision, which encompasses about 80 acres with about 60 homes and two apartments, is being considered for annexation by city officials. The annexation, along with several other land additions, will mean residents living in the area can be included in a special census being planned by the city in September.

The city for several years has discussed taking the site, but discussions in the past have also been stymied because the area is serviced by water utilities owned by John Philippe rather than by the city.

CITY ATTY. Donald Rose said Friday, however, no discussions have arisen now on the utilities and the system would remain owned and operated as it has been. Rose added the annexation will probably be acted upon by the city council at its June 11 meeting.

Acquisition of the site, bounded by Euclid Avenue, Rohlwing, Hicks and Kirchoff roads, can be accomplished with or without the consent of residents in the area because Illinois law allows a municipality which surrounds or nearly surrounds an unincorporated site of less than 60 acres to annex the site.

The subdivision is encircled by the city limits, although as an unincorporated area, it is served by the Palatine Rural Fire District and Cook County Sheriff's Police.

If the area is annexed to the city, property taxes would increase by about $60 on a home assessed at $10,000. The city levies no real estate tax except a 44-cent-per-$100-assessed-valuation rate for fire service and a 16-cent levy for the library board.

MOST HOMEOWNERS contacted were aware that the annexation had been considered at one time but were unaware of the planned June 11 action.

"Our people are certainly interested and we'll look into it," Denis Schnell of the Rohlwing-Hicks Homeowners Assn. said Friday. "About two years ago we ran a questionnaire among the property owners to see how they felt and there was a 50-50 split. Of course because we are under 60 acres, the city could do it."

"I would say the big stumbling block would be the sewer problem. Some of the people have sewers and some have septic tanks."

Of some 10 per cent of the area's homeowners contacted, the opinion toward annexation was about evenly mixed.

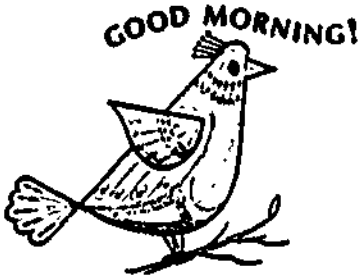

THOSE FAVORING annexation in general said they would like the benefits of city police and fire protection and use of the city library and park facilities, although the area would still remain a part of the Salt Creek Park District if annexed.

Those opposing the annexation said they preferred to remain unincorporated to keep taxes low.

"I'd be definitely against it and would do what I could to stop it," George Criel, 3905 Emerson, said. "What could they do for us? I live on the corner and if we get annexed, they would probably have to run a sewer line down by street. That would cost me money."

"My taxes are very low now and I'd like it to stay the way it is," Criel said. "If we have a fire, the Rolling Meadows department would come anyway. And

Grade-school teacher pact talks to drag?

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 teacher salary talks probably will continue into the summer, according to Tom Kelley, spokesman for the teacher negotiating team.

Dist. 15 is not the only area school district facing a late teacher-pay settlement. Of eight area school districts, only four have settled the salary question for the coming school year and in two of those, teachers are in the middle of a three-year contract. Districts 23, 25, 57 and 211 have not settled their salary questions.

"We hope to have a contract settlement before school starts (next fall)," he added. No agreement has been reached on salary items or working conditions, to date, but some of the more technical matters have been settled, Kelley added.

Negotiations last year ended in October, after six months of meeting and two months of protest activities by Dist. 15 teachers. Talks had been suspended over the summer so that teachers could study the financial status of the school district, officials said last year.

WHEN TALKS resumed in September, teachers refused a temporary 6 per cent pay raise, saying they wanted to settle salaries in one package. That unsuccessful negotiating session touched off a series of leafleting, petitioning and a protest march. No strikes were officially considered, but teachers, in their petition, did ask the board to reach a quick settlement "to avoid any disruption of the educational function of the school district."

Teachers and the board finally settled on an average 8.7 per cent pay raise, which included both the annual increase given automatically as teachers gain another year's experience and an approximate 5 per cent cost-of-living increase.

The raise brought the base salary up from $7,720 to $8,250 for a beginning teacher with a bachelor's and no experience. The highest salary is $18,306. The previous year's highest salary was $14,937.

NEGOTIATIONS for the coming school year started around the beginning of April. The fourth session was held last Thursday, when teachers presented a salary package to the board negotiating team, Kelly said. The board team said they would present their package to teacher negotiators before the next meeting, June 6, according to Kelley. Details of either package are not available.

"I would say that we still have some substantial negotiating before we reach agreement on the substantial issues," Kelley said. The "substantial issues" include more than just salaries, Kelley said.

"We would like to get across other

Use of pool halted by Arlington Towers

Park swimming program threatened

The Salt Creek Park District summer swim program, one of the district's major recreational programs, is in jeopardy because of a sudden decision by Arlington Park Towers officials to end the district's use of the hotel pool.

James DeVos, director of parks and recreation, said Friday officials of the hotel notified the district last week the pool would no longer be available to the park district. The hotel, which is located within the district, has long provided free use of the pool and other facilities at the race track complex to the district.

Golfing at the hotel course will still be offered, DeVos added.

THE SUDDEN DECISION was made last week after hotel officials told DeVos new policy dictated the move. "He said it was nothing we had done, but that it was just a matter of them feeling it interferes with their operations," DeVos said.

"We tried to tell them they were making a mistake. We're surely going to miss it."

DeVos added, however, that the district is negotiating with officials of the Baybrook condominiums located near Palatine Road and Winston Drive to use the swimming pool there for the summer program. He said a decision might be made today, but if no agreement is reached he would contact officials of the Willow Creek development near Rohlwing Road and Northwest Highway about use of their swimming facilities.

The Arlington Towers decision comes one year after a threat to end the swimming program was made. Hotel officials threatened to end the program because of what they said was rowdy conduct on the part of children using the pool.

At the same time the Howard Johnson motel in Palatine also ended its cooperative plan allowing the district use of its pool because of similar complaints about children.

THE PARK DISTRICT has no swimming facilities of its own, but its swim program has always been one of its most successful ventures, with some 400 children taking part in learn-to-swim programs offered. The program has never been a money-making venture for the district, however, despite the free use of the pool, with the district spending some $600 in excess of collected fees to run the program.

The park's summer brochure scheduled for release today will list the swim programs since the brochure was published before the decision was handed

Disease-carrying hamsters may have been sold in area

by LUISA GINETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn he may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID THE CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresge, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, Grant, T.G.Y., Treasurers, McNaw and Neisners.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfectant.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take.

Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

COMMERCIAL ARTIST James Aurand was one of many visitors to Lincoln School earlier this week during the school's annual career day for fifth and sixth graders.

The career day gives students an idea of what kind of job opportunities there are, so that they can make a better career choice.

I've had to call the county police and I was amazed at how soon they got here."

BUT EDWARD NATZKE, 2029 Forest, said he felt police and fire service would be improved if the area was part of the city.

"Right now our fire protection is like a garden hose," he said. "And the county police take from 45 minutes to 2 hours to come. We had an accident here a little while ago and it took the county 2 1/2 hours to get here."

Mrs. Wayne Jackson, 2306 Ashland, said annexation to the city probably should take place since the residents are close to Rolling Meadows schools and we do all our shopping in Rolling Meadows. With the mall, if we get a package and we're not home, we have to go all the way into Palatine to get it. She added the residents have also had difficulty getting a crossing guard for school children crossing Rohlfing Road because "we get batted back and forth between Rolling Meadows and Palatine."

"I'm all for it," Mrs. Carol Moritz, 3700 Emerson, said of the annexation. "The only problem is we have a septic tank and it works well. The existing sewer system isn't that great and I wouldn't really want to tie into it."

"But we would have the library," she said. "We don't go to Palatine much and if you do you are charged the rural rate (a higher rate) rather than the town rate."

things," he added, "other than salary and fringe benefits." The other things include working conditions, which Kelley refused to define specifically.

In other school districts, working conditions have included grievance procedures, class size, staff reductions, teacher evaluations and pupil discipline.

"Steady progress has been made," said Supt. Frank Whiteley, spokesman for the board's negotiating team.

$690 paint job set

The Rolling Meadows Park District is expected to spend $690 to paint the sports complex ceiling. No firm has been chosen for the work. A park district committee has recommended the work to be done.

THE PHILIPPE subdivision northwest of the present city limits may be annexed by Rolling Meadows June 11.

Swim program threatened down last week by hotel officials. "We've hired our whole swim staff, too," DeVos added. He said the staff of some 8 instructors have signed contracts and might have to be paid even if the swim program cannot be provided.

DeVos said although the district had been using the hotel pool, an average of only 22 persons from the district per a 10-hour period each day used the facility. He said the district also provided life guards for the hotel's use three times weekly.

"We're spending $10,000 a year for recreation for the back stretch people there in the summer, too," DeVos added. Because the district includes the race track, persons living on the back stretch during racing season use the district's recreational facilities.

The matter may now prompt the district board to think more seriously about a future referendum to build the district's own swimming pool in an area of development near Rolfe Lake which will become part of the district upon completion of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed program.

Salary talks spur teachers to rally

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 211 teachers will rally tonight to support their negotiating team now in salary contract talks with the district board of education.

Dan O'Brien, president of the Dist. 211 Education Assn., said teachers will gather at 7:15 p.m. in the Fremd High School gymnasium to discuss the board's offer of a 6.2 per cent increase in salary.

O'Brien said the association's negotiating team is asking for a 10 per cent increase in salary, which would raise the base pay for teachers from $8,950 to $9,850. Attendance at tonight's meeting will mean a vote of confidence for the bargaining team, said O'Brien. About 80 per cent of Dist. 211's 500 teachers are members of the education association.

THE MASS MEETING tonight is intended as a reaction to the board's "first, best and only offer," said O'Brien.

He said the board's proposal for increased salary "will again put teachers in the position of losing to the cost of living."

Last year the teachers accepted a 4 per cent increase in salary, but according to the teacher's association, Dist. 211 teachers actually took about a 4.7 per cent pay cut because the consumer price index increased about 8.8 per cent last year.

O'Brien said the board members are arguing that they will spend $1.5 million more for teachers salaries next year even if teachers agree to the 6.2 per cent raise. But O'Brien said much of that money will be used to pay the salaries of 50 new teachers the board is hiring for next year.

"We contend that we are bargaining only for teachers on the staff now," said O'Brien. Growth in enrollment and additional teaching staff should be the board's problem, he said.

DIST. 211 BOARD PRES. Robert Creek, chairman of the board's negotiating committee, said Friday, "The district is limited in its income." He said that it is important to remember that any increase in the base pay for teachers is in addition to the 5.3 per cent salary increment teacher receive for additional experience until they reach the top of the scale after 16 years.

Creek said he has no idea when a settlement will be reached on teacher contracts for next year and will not be able to tell what effect the rally will have on negotiations until it is over. The next negotiating session between teachers and the board is scheduled for tomorrow night. The two sides have been negotiating since February.

The teachers negotiating team recently withdrew a proposal which would give teachers salary increases during the year based on the consumer price index. The team wanted teacher salaries raised during the year if the index rose more than one per cent per quarter.

In addition the board's negotiating committee withdrew a proposal for a multi-year contract.

O'Brien said teachers are still asking for an increase in health and life insurance, a binding arbitration agreement which would call in a third party if negotiations deadlock, and increases in summer school salaries and extracurricular pay.

At rally concerning contract talks

High school teachers will back negotiators tonight

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 211 teachers will rally tonight to support their negotiating team now in salary contract talks with the district board of education.

Dan O'Brien, president of the Dist. 211 Education Assn., said teachers will gather at 7:15 p.m. in the Fremd High School gymnasium to discuss the board's offer of a 6.2 per cent increase in salary.

O'Brien said the association's negotiating team is asking for a 10 per cent increase in salary, which would raise the base pay for teachers from $9,850 to $9,850. Attendance at tonight's meeting will mean a vote of confidence for the bargaining team, said O'Brien. About 80 per cent of Dist. 211's 500 teachers are members of the education association.

THE MASS MEETING tonight is intended as a reaction to the board's "first, best and only offer," said O'Brien. He said the board's proposal for increased salary "will again put teachers in the position of losing to the cost of living."

Last year the teachers accepted a 4 per cent increase in salary, but according to the teacher's association, Dist. 211 teachers actually took about a 4.7 per cent pay cut because the consumer price index increased about 8.8 per cent last year.

O'Brien said the board members are arguing that they will spend $1.5 million more for teachers salaries next year even if teachers agree to the 6.2 per cent raise. But O'Brien said much of that money will be used to pay the salaries of 50 new teachers the board is hiring for next year.

"We contend that we are bargaining only for teachers on the staff now," said O'Brien. Growth in enrollment and additional teaching staff should be the board's problem, he said.

DIST. 211 BOARD Pres. Robert Creek, chairman of the board's negotiating committee, said Friday, "The district is limited in its income." He said that it is important to remember that any increase in the base pay for teachers is in addition to the 5.3 per cent salary increment teacher receive for additional experience until they reach the top of the scale after 16 years.

Creek said he has no idea when a settlement will be reached on teacher contracts for next year and will not be able to tell what effect the rally will have on negotiations until it is over. The next negotiating session between teachers and the board is scheduled for tomorrow night. The two sides have been negotiating since February.

The teachers negotiating team recently withdrew a proposal which would give teachers salary increases during the year based on the consumer price index. The team wanted teacher salaries raised during the year if the index rose more than one per cent per quarter.

In addition the board's negotiating committee withdrew a proposal for a multi-year contract.

O'Brien said teachers are still asking for an increase in health and life insurance, a binding arbitration agreement which would call in a third party if negotiations deadlock, and increases in summer school salaries and extracurricular pay.

Director of unit-district study may keep his money

by JUDY JOBBITT

Ralph Belnap, director of the controversial unit-district study for Schaumburg Township schools, still may keep the money he wants to give back to the district study committee.

Last week Belnap returned the $4,750 paid him for his report because no one seemed satisfied with the unit district study.

But a member of the committee that funded the report said an informal poll of committee members shows they want to convince Belnap to keep the money, a source, who refused to be identified, said.

THE COMMITTEE probably will not meet to discuss what should be done with the returned money, added the source. Other members said he has the right to the money because "it's money already spent" on costs incurred by the Northern Illinois University team that conducted it under Belnap.

Belnap returned the fee along with a letter explaining his position about the study. The letter was received by James Blankenship, vice chairman of the committee, last week.

Blankenship refused to comment on the letter stating it will be disclosed at the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 school board meeting June 6.

Belnap said he is standing behind his report because it presents what he found and recommendations he believes in.

CONTROVERSY AROSE about the report when a committee of 10 citizens formed to circulate petitions for a Schaumburg area unit district, one of the recommended districts in the report.

The petition was formed on Belnap's suggestion, said a committee member.

When Belnap presented the final draft of the report to the committee, he said he did not realize the tax base Dist. 54 could lose if Rolling Meadows formed a unit district incorporating part of Schaumburg Township.

At that time, Belnap said a petition to protect Schaumburg's tax base "probably would not hurt," said the source.

THE FINAL DRAFT also included maps that delineated the various unit districts recommended in the study. Besides the Schaumburg area unit district, unit districts were recommended for Palatine and Inverness, and Hoffman Estates and Rolling Meadows.

The committee requested the maps be removed from the final report made public May 10. They feared the maps would make it too easy for another area, particularly Rolling Meadows, to circulate petitions for a unit district of its own, said Blankenship.

The petition committee feared Rolling Meadows could petition for a unit district and incorporate Walden and Motorola into the district's tax base.

Although more than 600 signatures have been obtained on the petitions, the committee does not intend to file them with the Cook County school superintendent. Signatures from 200 citizens are required to file a unit district petition.

The committee will only file the petitions if a threat arises, said Blankenship.

Juvenile arrested after armed robbery

A male juvenile was arrested Saturday night in connection with an armed robbery Thursday in which $700 was taken from the 7-Eleven Store, 21 W. Wise Rd., Schaumburg.

The incident Thursday was the third armed robbery at the business since April 19. Police said the youth was arrested by Det. Tom Ostermann and Patrolman Lester Bassel and is not believed to be connected with the earlier incidents.

The youth is to be transported to the Audy Home, Chicago, where it will be decided what formal charges will be filed, police said Sunday.

Parks accept Jaycee Park

Schaumburg Jaycees completed one of their most extensive projects Saturday when they officially turned over Jaycee Park to the Schaumburg Park District.

Park officials Paul Derda and Ron Dudley took charge of the facility at Cornell and Syracuse Lanes in a special ceremony.

The Jaycees in 1968 requested a lease from village officials for the 11-acre site. The organization has since spent more than $13,000 raised in the community and approximately 9,600 man hours developing the area.

An additional $1,000 in funds raised through a Jaycee environmental project was used for trees and shrubs at the park.

"The park site is developed to a stage where the needs of the community will best be served by the Jaycees' relinquishing control of the park to the park district which is structured to maintain and control the area," said Jim Rogers, Jaycee president.

During the past six years the Jaycees have worked closely with Mayor Robert O. Atcher and village officials. The Jaycees thank all who helped for their continued support, he added.

3-year jail sentence for Peskin

by NANCY COWGER

Bernard M. Peskin, "the fixer" in the Hoffman Estates Kaufman and Broad zoning bribery scandal, was sentenced to three years in a federal prison Friday by U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr.

McGarr set Aug. 8 for Peskin to surrender to Chicago Federal marshals and begin serving his sentence, but he noted Peskin's intention to appeal his conviction. The surrender date can be extended, pending the appeal, McGarr said.

McGarr said he intentionally set a longer prison term for Peskin that he had given any of the six former Hoffman Estates officials who pleaded guilty in the zoning bribery scheme. "That was not accidental. His culpability is greater," said McGarr.

PESKIN WAS convicted April 4 by a federal jury of five counts of bribery, one of conspiracy and one of tax evasion stemming from passing $35,000 in bribes from Kaufman and Broad to village officials in 1968.

McGarr said both on these village officials, and on Kaufman and Broad, before pronouncing sentence.

"Not all public officials were venal and corrupt" in Hoffman Estates in 1968, "but the majority were," said McGarr, referring to "ethical conditions in that village at that time."

"It was a black day for the citizens of Hoffman Estates when the corrupt influence of Kaufman and Broad first insinuated itself into village affairs," he said. McGarr noted Kaufman and Broad had pleaded guilty and had received the maximum fine for the charges it faced, $50,000. "But the frustrating fact is that does not harm or hardly even touch the anonymous men behind the corporation," he said.

PESKIN PLEADED for leniency in sentencing, citing his health and background as considerations in his favor. His physician, Dr. Nicholas Capos, described surgery he performed on Peskin for cancer in 1971, and said patients with Peskin's condition have a 30 per cent survival rate over five years.

"This man is on borrowed time. Sending this man away would be inhumane treatment," said Capos.

Peskin's attorney, Thomas P. Sullivan, cited Peskin's accomplishments as a state representative and his charitable and civic contributions in seeking probation for Peskin, rather than a prison sentence.

BUT ASSISTANT U.S. Atty. Anton Valukas, the prosecutor, responded, "Peskin was not a virgin," and said in spite of his "impressive background" Peskin "did what he did not out of necessity but out of greed."

"Peskin was a fixer — one of a particular breed of lawyers we see in Chicago," said Valukas, adding, "It is because of persons like Peskin that the bribery system continues."

"If the system (of government) is to survive, if people are to believe when they go before a public body that they'll get a fair hearing — nothing more, nothing less — people like Peskin must be put out of business," Valukas said.

McGarr noted he would not entertain motions by the government to add a fine to the sentence.

Disease-carrying hamsters may have been sold in area

by LUISA GINETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn he may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID THE CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresge, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, Grant, T.G.Y., Tresslers, McNaw and Neimans.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfectant.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take. Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

Automakers to seek air bags delay

U.S. automakers will ask the federal government today to back off on its demand for safety air bags to be installed on all 1977 model cars. General Motors, the nation's biggest automaker will present its arguments for a delay, in testimony which has the backing of the other three members of the "Big Four."

Nixon milk support explanation rebutted

Senate Watergate investigators have rebutted President Nixon's explanation that he raised the price support of raw milk because Congress was holding a "gun to our head" and would have passed a much larger increase. In a staff report detailing a milk producers' pledge of $2 million to Nixon's 1972 campaign, the investigators concluded there was no such threat and that the increase OK'd by Nixon was higher than that proposed on Capitol Hill.

Pentagon issues will occupy Senate

A new dispute over the Navy's F14 "Tomcat" fighter plane and a liberal list of 18 ways to cut the 1975 Pentagon arms budget promise to occupy most of the Senate's attention this week. The $21.8 billion military procurement bill is being rushed to the floor months ahead of its normal schedule because the Senate is struggling to clear the calendar for a possible impeachment trial of President Nixon late this summer.

Authorities cautious in Patty hunt

Threats from the radical underground and a series of bombings are keeping federal and local authorities in Los Angeles cautious and suspicious in their search for Patricia Hearst. The 20-year-old heiress, who has claimed allegiance with the remnants of her Symbionese Liberation Army captors, was believed still in Southern California.

Probe of Naval Academy middies continues

Commencement week festivities went on without interruption yesterday with Naval Academy officials in Annapolis, Md., promising a full report in about 10 days on an investigation into cheating on final examinations which may result in the dismissal of more than 20 midshipmen. Honor boards have been meeting for more than a week to determine the guilt or innocence of about 60 sophomores accused of cheating on a final exam.

Nixon prepares for Mideast trip

President Nixon spent a rainy Sunday at his mountaintop retreat at Camp David, Md., studying preliminary preparations for his Middle East swing and Moscow summit trip later this month. Administration officials indicated Nixon will formally announce the dates of his tour of Arab capitals and Israel some time this week. An advance team of security, protocol and communications experts was expected to leave Washington today to make preparations.

Republican Senatorial candidate George Burditt pledged yesterday he will conduct his campaign on a strict moral level which will demand that "nothing untruthful, misleading or distorted shall be said about me or my opponent." Two teenagers drowned early yesterday in Chicago's Marquette Park lagoon when a car being used for a driving lesson plunged into the water. They were: Mary Toczek, the driver, and her boyfriend, Joseph Zakrzewski, 19.

Move under way for new nerve gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First, the victim loses all muscular control over his body and cannot even blink his eyes. Within seconds, his limbs are paralyzed. Within a couple of minutes, he suffocates because he cannot breathe.

He is the victim of a microscopic droplet of odorless, tasteless, colorless nerve gas, a terrifying weapon stockpiled by most major world powers and some smaller nations. It has never been used in war.

Now the United States is on the verge of making a major change in nerve gas weaponry. The Defense Department asked Congress for $5.8 million in stand-by funds in the event a final decision is made to begin production.

Meanwhile, Army Secretary Howard H. Callaway is to receive soon a secret staff report on whether open-air testing of the new system will be required before production can begin.

A House Foreign Affairs subcommittee, conceding it lacks jurisdiction over the chemical warfare controversy, held a little-publicized series of hearings recently in an attempt to stir public debate before yet another sophisticated military delivery system is created by default.

Unlike the nerve gas now stockpiled in canisters ready for use, the new proposed "binary system" would keep two nerve gas ingredients separate — and harmless — until they are merged at the moment of firing.

The Pentagon insists the binary system is not a big new weapon but simply an improved delivery system which would make transportation and storage of nerve gas safer and cleaner.

Amos A. Jordan, acting assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, testified the U. S. needs the new system to deter use of chemical warfare in any future war.

Critics counter that nerve gas has not been used because it requires bulky protective suits and masks for all troops; there is no real defense for civilians; and once released, the gas is virtually impossible to control.

Nearly every country, including the Soviet Union but not the United States, is party to a 1925 Geneva protocol barring the use of chemical and biological warfare. Although the Senate has never ratified the treaty, a succession of presidents has reaffirmed the U.S. would never be the first to use such weapons.

Impeachment on your TV? Chances slim

From United Press International

Americans who planned to spend their summer watching impeachment hearings on television may as well make other plans.

The House Judiciary Committee faces so many legal problems in opening its proceedings to the public, that there appeared to be little chance any portion of the deliberations leading up to a mid-July vote on impeachment of President Nixon would be televised.

The White House has complained that the committee is dragging out the proceedings and wants them opened to the public.

The panel voted 23 to 15 last Thursday not to open the hearings this Tuesday as originally planned. On Friday, Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., decided that none of the committee's evidence would be made public until the panel had gone over all the material. This will take another two to three weeks — and longer if additional matter is provided by the White House, government agencies, courts or other congressional committees.

Only then will the committee decide which, if any, witnesses will be called to testify to fill in gaps the panel has determined exist in its evidence — and under House rules a witness could bar TV coverage during his testimony.

The final phase of debating and voting on articles of impeachment to be recommended to the full House also can be held — and probably would be — without television since that would take place in a committee "meeting" and unanimous consent of the 38 members is required to permit TV.

Nevertheless, officials at three TV networks — NBC, CBS and ABC — feel the hearings should be open and televised because possible impeachment of the President is of such importance that opening the hearings and televising them is vital to the democratic process.

The officials also said open hearings would ensure the belief the inquiry was being conducted fairly. They added that TV coverage would reduce selective leaks aimed at damaging the President and not aiding him.

Mideast cease-fire holding

From United Press International

Syrian and Israeli generals in Geneva Sunday held their second meeting through a Finnish go-between to work out the technical details of the military disengagement agreement signed Friday.

In the Middle East, Israeli troops on the Lebanese frontier reported killing two Arab guerrilla infiltrators late Saturday who were carrying weapons, explosives and enough food for five days.

In Damascus, a guerrilla spokesman confirmed the two guerrillas were killed. But he said the raiding party "inflicted heavy losses on the enemy."

Israeli spokesmen reported no casualties of their own. They said it was assumed the infiltration was the latest in a series aimed at duplicating the May 15 attack on Maalot that left 31 persons dead.

The cease-fire on the Golan Heights front with Syria was reported holding firm, with the next prisoner exchange expected later this week. U.N. troops from Austria and Peru stood by to move in between the Israeli and Syrian armies.

In Jerusalem, Golda Meir's cabinet held its final meeting Sunday and heaped praise on Mrs. Meir on the eve of her turning the prime ministership over to Yitzhak Rabin.

Rabin commanded Israeli troops in the victorious 1967 war with the Arabs, and he was ambassador to the United States during the controversial 1973 war.

His cabinet, which will be without such old guard stalwarts as Defense Minister Moshe Dayan and Foreign Minister Abba Eban, faces its vote of confidence Monday. Despite its narrow one-vote majority in the 120-member Knesset parliament, it is expected to win approval.

Meanwhile, Palestine Arabs accused Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger Sunday of exceeding the limits of his Middle East peace mission, monopolizing the situation and getting only a fragmented agreement serving American interests.

A paper presented to a meeting of the Palestinian National Council parliament also said the Soviet Union was making every effort to keep the United States from "monopolizing" peace initiatives in the Middle East.

Garment workers strike slated to begin today

NEW YORK (UPI) — The full impact of the first nationwide garment strike was expected to be felt Monday when more than 100,000 workers strike boys and men's clothing makers on orders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The action was directed at cutters, machine operators, buttonhole makers and other workers who are scheduled to set up picket lines unless a settlement is reached. Both sides said they were willing to resume negotiations on the call of a federal mediator. However, no date was set for a resumption of talks.

The union is seeking a wage increase and cost-of-living and fringe benefits clauses including larger pensions, more holidays and vacation time. The garment workers currently earn an average wage of $3.50 an hour.

The union called its last strike in the boys and men's apparel industry in 1920.

Pravda prints optimism about upcoming Nixon visit

• The advance word is good in the Soviet Union on President Nixon's forthcoming summit trip. The Communist party newspaper Pravda, which gives the advance line on such things, said in its Sunday edition that the visit — to begin June 27 — opens possibilities for co-operation on a number of important problems, and probably would build on past summits between Nixon and party boss Leonid Brezhnev, in which they "laid a lasting foundation for Soviet-American cooperation on the basis of peaceful coexistence."

• There was no comment Sunday from the Silver Hill Foundation Hospital in New Canaan, Conn., on the condition of Joan Kennedy, wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. Mrs. Kennedy was admitted to Silver Hill — a private psychiatric hospital for the wealthy — last week for a period of prolonged rest. A family spokesman said Mrs. Kennedy has been under continuing strain since the amputation of the cancer-infected leg of their eldest son last November. The only word on Mrs. Kennedy's condition came from the senator Saturday, when he said she was doing very well.

King Jigme actually has ruled since the death of his father in July, 1972, but the coronation had to await a decent mourning period and the picking of the most auspicious date by astrologers — and it went on despite a reported assassination threat.

• As if the Rev. John McLaughlin has not stirred up enough of a fuss, now he says he's available to perform exorcisms. McLaughlin is the Jesuit priest who works as a $25,000 a year aide to President Nixon, lives in the plush Watergate complex, and aroused his superiors with his defenses of Nixon, including his use of profanity in the Watergate transcripts. In an interview, McLaughlin said he regards celibacy as obsolete, and added, "even though I work at the White House, I am available for weddings, funerals, baptisms and exorcisms."

• Despite a hint from the British government that it will send them home if they stop it, Delours and Martin Price — two Irish women convicted of car bombings in London — continued their 200-day hunger strike in London's Brixton prison. The two have lived on only water the past two weeks, after a long period of forced feeding was stopped on medical advice. The government indicated it would transfer them to a Northern Ireland prison — which they want — but they have to stop the hunger strike first.

Parents' group wants teachers trained as 'non-sexists'

Judy Brady-Keller

by JILL BETTNER
A School Dist. 21 parent group has asked the school board to provide teacher training aimed at eliminating sexual bias in the classroom.
The Citizens Task Force on Education, headed by Judy Brady-Keller and Carol Wrabl of Arlington Heights, last week requested the board to set up the training and offered to assist in conducting workshops or other sessions. The task force is a self-appointed group and was not organized by the school board.
In addition to the teacher training, the group also has proposed the creation of a bookmobile to circulate non-sexist materials around Dist. 21 schools enabling teachers to supplement textbooks already in use.

THE GROUP CONDUCTED a survey of educational materials used in Dist. 21 about two months ago and concluded that many contain and/or stereotyped sex roles.
Following the survey, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of the objectionable materials. In response, the board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.
The proposals for teacher training and a bookmobile are two of the parent group's ideas for implementing the board policy.

A PROPOSED OUTLINE for the teacher training program drawn up by the task force lists the objectives of the training as:

- To enable participants to gain an awareness of the manifestations of sex stereotyping in education and its implications for the future.
- To offer methods whereby school personnel can develop their own strategies for eliminating sex discrimination in the classroom.

• To provide followup consultation as necessary.

Through various methods such as lectures, small group activities, discussions and audiovisual aids, the task force suggest covering such topics as elementary school textbooks and other educational materials, career counseling, physical education, sex education and family life, teacher expectations and extracurricular activities.

THE GROUP ALSO proposed discussing "methodology for incorporating an awareness of human rights into the curriculum and development of action (Continued on page 5)

Residents' attempt to block thrown out

Controversial condos get the go-ahead from judge

by MARCIA KRAMER

A Cook County Circuit Court judge has given the go-ahead for construction of a controversial 80-unit condominium building at the northwest corner of River and Camp McDonald roads in Mount Prospect.

Judge Arthur L. Dunne Friday heard brief oral arguments, then threw out an attempt by 16 residents of the area, in the northeast section of the village, to intervene in the case in order to block the project.

Moments later, the judge signed the compromise consent decree allowing construction of the Y-shaped five-story structure on the 3.3-acre site. The compromise had been agreed to earlier by the developer, J. M. Brickman Mid-West Corp., Mount Prospect, and by the Village of Mount Prospect.

DONALD KREGER, attorney for the residents, was unavailable for comment, but Robert Barrett, a leader of the effort to intervene, said the residents "absolutely" will appeal the ruling to the Illinois Appellate Court "if we're persistent and stick together, we're going to beat it," he said.

Brickman, meanwhile, said he plans to break ground on the project "within 30 days" and hopes to complete it by next spring.

The project, known as "The Villas of Port-Au-Prince Condominiums," has been the subject of controversy since it was proposed two years ago. The village board twice voted in favor of rezoning the property to allow the project, but not by a two-thirds majority, which was necessitated when surrounding property owners filed official objections to the rezoning request.

BRICKMAN subsequently sued the village, seeking rezoning for 113 units in five stories and a ground level of commercial offices. Village trustees, evidently fearful the village would lose the suit, agreed April 2 to an out-of-court settlement allowing 80 units, or slightly over 24 units per acre, but no commercial space.

Sixteen residents of Mura Lane and Park Drive, calling themselves "Concerned Citizens of Northeast Mount Prospect," opposed the compromise and attempted to intervene in the case to in effect replace the village as defendant and fight the rezoning.

The homeowners contend the condominiums would be incompatible with the surrounding neighborhood, which is single-family residential, and could cause flooding in the area.

THE PROPERTY had been zoned for commercial and multi-family use while in unincorporated Wheeling Township, before it was involuntarily annexed to Mount Prospect with single-family residential zoning.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert, who cast the tie-breaking vote in favor of the 80-unit compromise, Friday stood behind the village board's decision. "There has to be someone who speaks on behalf of the community. I don't think it can be individuals, but elected officials."

He took a verbal stab at the "Concerned Citizens" group. "We already have a group of concerned citizens, and they're called village trustees," he said.

Hearing tonight

A hearing will be conducted tonight on the request of Dair Inc., Chicago, to convert the former A&P grocery store in downtown Mount Prospect to a banquet hall.

The village's zoning board of appeals will conduct the hearing, beginning at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

Rabid bat found at Maryville

At least six Maryville Academy of Des Plaines students were to begin preventive treatment for rabies over the weekend after coming in contact with a bat found on the school grounds last week.

Des Plaines police said three of the youngsters 10, 10 and 12 years old, were bitten by the bat, later confirmed to be carrying the disease while another three were bitten or scratched.

The bat was found by a group of children near a chapel Tuesday afternoon and the animal, according to reports, was passed among several of the youths before it was turned over to a school nurse.

County rabies control authorities confirmed Thursday the animal was rabid and there was suspicion initially that as many as 35 Maryville students had come in contact with it.

School administrators called an assembly of their 323 students Friday afternoon and learned however that only six youngsters were bitten or scratched and would have to undergo treatment.

RABIES TREATMENT consists of a series of 14 shots administered every day or every other day and can take two weeks or more to complete.

Dr. Robert Keough, of the Cook County Animal Control Department said he was worried about the situation at first because of the bat's increasing importance over the years as a carrier of the disease.

He said Friday that bats and skunks, "are primary carriers of rabies." The disease is normally transmitted through the animal's saliva into the person's nervous system when it bites or scratches someone.

KEOUGH, HOWEVER, mentioned recent tests that have shown bats to be able to communicate the disease "airborne," or through the air, without any one being bitten or scratched.

Two research workers died of rabies once after having been in a cave with a large number of bats, even though they were not bitten.

Keough said parents should advise their children, "never to handle sick animals but to call the local police for advice."

Prospect Heights park referendum rates 'yes'

Prospect Heights Park District residents should vote in favor of the $1.1 million referendum Tuesday.

The referendum, which calls for major renovation in the district, fits into the overall plan of the growing community. It is a solid and practical approach to give the people of the Prospect Heights community something they can be proud of in future years.

With the passage of the referendum and the promises park district officials make, the people of this unincorporated area will have something to call their own. This also may give a feeling of belonging to people who are still without a local government.

Residents of the park district should remember that these improvements are for them. They are not only for the children of the district, but for the adults as well.

The addition of handball courts, a gymnasium, art and crafts rooms and meeting rooms will open up a new area of fun and recreation for park district residents.

It also is important that the referendum pass in order that Lions Park Pool be completely renovated as soon as possible. If the referendum fails the state will close the pool after this summer.

The estimated cost of the referendum is low compared with what the same improvements would cost one year from now if the referendum had to be refiled. Residents should not pass by this chance to improve the parks and add important development to the community.

Schools to honor retiring teachers

Four retiring teachers in Dist. 57 will be feted at a dinner Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Lancer's Steak House, 50 E. Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg.

Teachers to be honored include Audrey Cline, learning disabilities teacher at Lion's Park School; Lois McCord, kindergarten teacher at Fairview School; Anna O'Connor, fifth grade teacher at Busse School; and Eleanor Sturwalt, first grade teacher at Fairview School.

The dinner is being co-sponsored by the Mount Prospect Education Assn. and the Dist. 57 Board of Education.

Teacher contract talks hit impasse

by LUISA GINETTI

The Dist. 23 Board of Education negotiating team has called an impasse in bargaining talks with the Prospect Heights Education Assn. for a 1974-75 teacher contract.

The decision was announced last week when the three-member board team failed to agree to the PHEA's request that a respite be called in negotiations to allow both sides time to consider further compromise.

According to terms set in the professional negotiating agreement binding both sides, four steps must now be taken before an outside mediator is called into the dispute:

- The board negotiating team must meet with all members of the association.
- The PHEA negotiating team must meet with the full board of education.
- Negotiating teams will meet with their respective organizations.
- Negotiating teams will meet again to see if impasse can be remedied.

KEN BATES, a member of the PHEA negotiating team and a teacher at MacArthur Junior High, said the teachers will hold a membership meeting at 3:15 p.m. Wednesday at MacArthur.

The board negotiating team has been invited to attend the session but Alan Krinsky, chairman of the board team, said this meeting is tentative because not all board negotiators may be able to attend.

Bates said the teachers will hold a meeting with or without the board negotiators.

Bates said the PHEA wants all four steps as defined in the agreement to be carried out before a mediator is brought in. "Our people have some very pointed questions they want to ask the board," Bates said.

He added that although the professional negotiating agreement calls for all four steps to be completed within 15 days of notification of impasse, more time may be necessary to get both sides together. Bates said he believes they are "several weeks away from mediation."

KRINSKY SAID THE two sides are far enough apart that an agreement cannot be reached as negotiations stand now. When asked if the separation between the PHEA demands and the board pro-

$1,400 machinery stolen from site

Generating and pumping machinery valued at $1,400 was stolen from one Elk Grove Village construction site and another site was vandalized in separate incidents, according to Village police reports.

The theft occurred at a site near 550 Busse when thieves made their way into a storage shed and stole seven pieces of the machinery, probably late Wednesday.

Police said a lock securing a door to the shed was either opened with a key or cut completely off. At least two burglars using a vehicle to haul the heavy machinery away are believed responsible.

Police also said a building site at 851 Fargo was vandalized when three windows were broken and a fourth cracked in a building causing a total of $360 damage.

A foreman, John McCormick, of Ockerlund Construction Co., of Morton Grove told police he was reporting to work Wednesday morning and discovered the breakage and that a scaffold platform was overturned.

posals is substantial, Krinsky said "an inch is as good as a mile in this case."

Bates said the PHEA "anticipates" the board's action. "The board is taking a pessimistic view and looking at the darkest side of everything," Bates said.

The PHEA spokesman added that the teachers are confident more money will be coming to the district in state aid as a result of recent decisions in the Illinois General Assembly.

The Illinois Senate voted last week to restore some $70 million in state aid to local schools which had been cut from the budget by Gov. Daniel Walker.

BATES SAID THE board is apparently concerned that the legislature will not restore the full state aid package, cutting a substantial portion of funds to the district. The board is also apparently concerned, according to Bates, with the possibility of losing state aid if the complex equalizer formula index for Cook County is reduced.

Bates said only $17,500 separates the two sides with the PHEA seeking a total monetary package of $123,000 and the board offering a total package of $106,500.

"The question is what will the legislature do," Bates said. "We believe the funding is there and will be there."

Non-fatal illness

Diseased pets sold in area?

by LUISA GINETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn he may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID the CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresge, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, Grant, T.G.Y., Tresslers, McNaw and Neisners.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfected.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take.

Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

Swimming pool passes on sale

The Mount Prospect Park District is selling swimming pool passes for the 1974 season.

Passes cost $25 for families with up to five members; $15 for adults and $10 for children up to 14 years of age. They can be purchased at the park district office in the Lions Park Recreation Center, 411 S. Maple St.

Swim passes this year will be honored at pools in Arlington Heights and Des Plaines under a reciprocal agreement with the two neighboring park districts.

agendas for elimination of sex-stereotyping in the classroom" and resources and followup planning including review of materials available for teacher and student use.

Objectives set up by the group for the bookmobile include:

- To expose children to supplementary non-sexist materials and expand their concepts of role identity.
- To expose school staff to supplementary non-sexist materials and sources both for professional and personal growth.

Materials the group proposes including in the bookmobile are books, slides, films, audio-tapes and others "presenting people in positive fulfilling life roles."

THESE MATERIALS could more specifically include biographies of men and women, books portraying "non-traditional" careers for men and women, "more realistic fictional accounts of children and adults" and non-sexist games.

The school board has agreed to study the task force proposals and has directed the administration to do likewise.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said Friday no decision has been made on what action, if any, will be taken on the suggestions.

"It's too premature for me to say that's a way we want to go," Gill said. "But I think there's definitely room for inservice teacher training in those areas."

Parents' group wants teachers trained as 'non-sexists'

Judy Brady-Keller

by JILL BETTNER
A School Dist. 21 parent group has asked the school board to provide teacher training aimed at eliminating sexual bias in the classroom.
The Citizens Task Force on Education, headed by Judy Brady-Keller and Carol Wrabl of Arlington Heights, last week requested the board to set up the training and offered to assist in conducting workshops or other sessions. The task force is a self-appointed group and was not organized by the school board.
In addition to the teacher training, the group also has proposed the creation of a bookmobile to circulate non-sexist materials around Dist. 21 schools enabling teachers to supplement textbooks already in use.

THE GROUP CONDUCTED a survey of educational materials used in Dist. 21 about two months ago and concluded that many contain and/or stereotyped sex roles.
Following the survey, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of the objectionable materials. In response, the board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.
The proposals for teacher training and a bookmobile are two of the parent group's ideas for implementing the board policy.

A PROPOSED OUTLINE for the teacher training program drawn up by the task force lists the objectives of the training as:
• To enable participants to gain an awareness of the manifestations of sex stereotyping in education and its implications for the future.
• To offer methods whereby school personnel can develop their own strategies for eliminating sex discrimination in the classroom.

• To provide followup consultation as necessary.
Through various methods such as lectures, small group activities, discussions and audiovisual aids, the task force suggests covering such topics as elementary school textbooks and other educational materials, career counseling, physical education, sex education and family life, teacher expectations and extracurricular activities.
THE GROUP ALSO proposed discussing "methodology for incorporating an awareness of human rights into the curriculum and development of action (Continued on page 5)

Military losing 'good-neighbor' status?

Army chief wants to keep Nike base for reservists

50 picket Nike site in 'warm up'

Approximately 50 persons picketed the Nike base in Arlington Heights Sunday, protesting the U.S. Army Reserve decision to use the facility, said Marty Cawley, member of a citizens committee opposing the situation.
The arrival of neighbors at the scene caused the base commander to have gates locked and military personnel were called to the perimeter, Cawley added.

The picketing went on for about an hour, he said, adding, Sunday's demonstration was a "warm up" and "the big move" is planned for this coming Sunday.

by KURT BAER

The chief of the U.S. Army reserves has recommended that the Army hold on to the Arlington Heights Nike base as a reserve training center.

However, a counter-recommendation by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., has warned that the residents of Arlington Heights may cease to look at the Army as a "good neighbor" if it decides to retain control of the former missile site.

The two positions were forwarded last week to the assistant secretary of the Army for installation and logistics, Eugene E. Berg, who will determine whether the base will be used by the Army, or given over to the Arlington Heights Park District.

Berg's decision is now expected in about two weeks.

A SPOKESMAN FOR U.S. Army Gen. J. Roberts, reserves chief, said in Washington Friday that the reserves were interested in the Nike base and that "negotiations are under way to get the use of it, definitely."

But a Crane spokesman, Edward Murnane, said the Congressman was aware of the general's recommendation, and "not overly concerned with it." "That was the (reserves') position in the first place," Murnane said.

A resolution passed by the Arlington Heights village board on May 20 and calling on the military to give up the Nike base has been sent to the Army's assistant secretary along with a letter from Crane, Murnane said.

"I hope this resolution indicates to you the strong feelings of Arlington Heights' residents on this subject, and I hope you will give this resolution very strong consideration as the fate of the site is deliberated," Crane wrote.

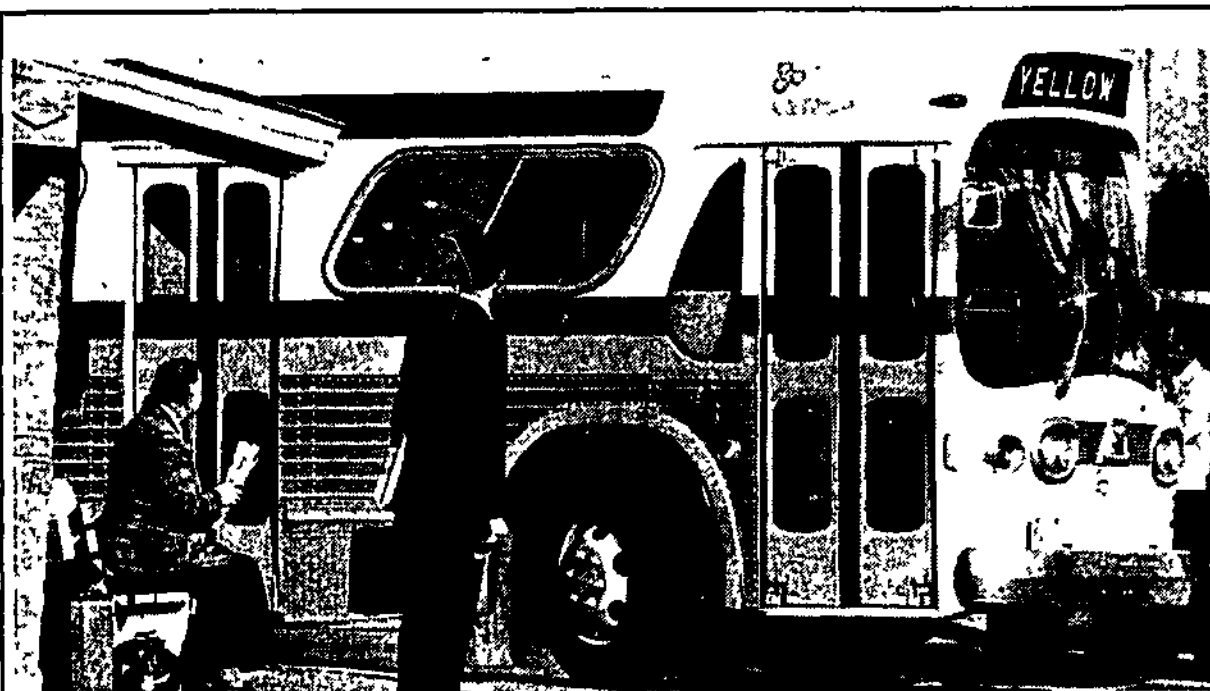

"THE PEOPLE OF Arlington Heights have considered the U.S. Army a good neighbor but I am afraid this feeling will change substantially if the Army decides to retain this property."

"I realize your decision will be a difficult one and I appreciate your willingness to consider the wishes of Arlington Heights residents in forming your decision," he wrote.

If the Army decides to keep control of its 75 acres at the Nike base, Berg has said he will come to Arlington Heights to explain personally the reason for the decision.

Martin Cawley, a member of the Citizens Committee for Utilization of the Nike Base, said Friday that it is becoming increasingly difficult to restrain citizen protest over the Army's continued

Riders will have to find new way to work

Last run for Metron commuter bus

by KURT BAER

Some 100 commuters from Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove will have to find a different way to work today.

The men and women had been riders of Metron Systems shuttle bus to and from the Arlington Heights train station.

But the buses won't run today, or tomorrow, or for an indefinite period after that. Metron made its last run Friday evening.

"I'm sad that it had to fail," said Thomas Fox, 810 E. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights.

Fox said he had ridden the bus every day last week and "thought it was excellent." He thinks more advertising might have cut the company's losses, which were amounting to $4,500 a month.

"I had a chance to really experience what these people had here, and I feel sorry for them now that it's over," he said.

ANOTHER RIDER, Joseph Good of 506 E. Knob Hill Dr., Arlington Heights, said he is going to have to depend on his wife to drive him to and from the station.

"It's going to be more of a burden on my wife, especially in the evening when it's prime time for a wife to be at home," he says.

Asked whether he would consider buying a second car to drive and park at the depot, Good had to say, "I guess it might be a good idea."

"I thought the bus service was great and I certainly would have liked to see it continued," he said.

A DECISION by the Arlington Heights village board not to subsidize bus operations at a cost of from $60,000 to $80,000 to the end of the year, brought Metron to the end of the line Friday.

"Metron is truly sorry to have to do this," company president Claude Luisada said in a farewell letter to his riders.

"Throughout our short term of service, it was the company's policy to render the best service we could, and, all things considered, I believe the customer received his money's worth," Luisada wrote.

MARTY JOYCE of Buffalo Grove said he got his money's worth since the Villa Verde apartment complex where he lives includes bus transportation to and from the train station as part of the rent.

"I'm going to move closer in," Joyce said. "The apartment managers have said they'll release people from the lease agreement if they can't provide bus transportation."

The complex is now considering buying a small van to take its commuter residents to the train station, Joyce said.

Lawrence Hilliard, 2612 N. Windsor Drive, Arlington Heights, has ridden Metron's bus since its first day of operation nine months ago.

"It's been very useful and I still feel the community could support a bus service," he said. But the basic problem, Hilliard recognizes, is simply the economics of it. "You need more utility of the buses to make it more profitable."

"More extensive research as to the need for the service and where that need lies might have helped," he said.

HILLIARD, LIKE most other Arlington Heights commuters, will now drive and park his car at the station now that the bus no longer runs.

In absolute terms, Metron's ridership was small — too small for a majority of Arlington Heights trustees to justify an infusion of village tax dollars.

The two buses, owned by the village, will be put in moth balls in case they can be used in some future village bus system.

"We sincerely thank you for your patronage," Luisada told his riders. "And if ever again we are able to operate, we hope you will once again ride with us."

He closed the letter with the optimistic words, "Until better times."

Disease-carrying hamsters may have been sold in area

by LUISA GINETTI

Your pet hamster may be cute and cuddly but if you purchased it between Dec. 4 and April 1 health officials warn he may be a carrier of a disease which could leave a person ill for 10 to 14 days.

The Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., reports that hamsters purchased during this time span may be carriers of lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a non-fatal disease with symptoms resembling influenza. Recovery is usually complete within two weeks, health officials say.

Bob Alden of the CDC said 93 cases of the disease have been reported nationwide as of April but none of these has been in Illinois.

Although the CDC recommended disposing of hamsters purchased from Dec. 4 through April 1, Alden said Friday it is likely that if a person has not contracted the disease by now, his pet is probably not a carrier.

ALDEN SAID THE CDC recommended destroying the animals because there is "no practical way" to test the pets. In order to determine if a hamster is a carrier of the disease, a blood sample must be taken and Alden said it is difficult to extract blood from hamsters.

Marjorie C. Boswell, Mount Prospect, director of health services, said 14 stores in Mount Prospect sold the possibly contaminated animals, which were distributed by Aquarium Supply Co. of Harrison, N. J.

The Mount Prospect stores are Woolworth's, Goldblatt's, Sears, Kresge, Murphy, Hornsby, K-Mart, Ben Franklin, Shultz, Grant, T.G.V., Treaslers, McNaw and Nelsens.

Mrs. Boswell said state health officials recommend disposing of the bedding, food and water of possible carrier hamsters and that their cages be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and disinfectant.

Lucille Wiedeman, health director in Des Plaines, said a check of area stores there showed they had not purchased hamsters from the distributor during the timespan in question.

PALATINE HEALTH director Richard Dawson said his department has not received any reports of persons contracting the disease, but his office has contacted some stores to alert them of the problem.

"The biggest thing is handling," Dawson said. "Mothers are the most susceptible to it (the disease) because they usually wind up cleaning the cages."

"It's extremely important to use good personal hygiene," Dawson added, saying this is the best precaution to take. Officials in the Schaumburg Health Department said they received notification from the CDC but no complaints or reports of problems have been received from residents. The department has not issued any notification to residents.

In Hoffman Estates, officials of the health department said they have not received any word from federal or state health officials about the situation.

OFFICIALS IN THE Arlington Heights Health Department said they have not been informed of the hamster problem.

Alden said last week there has been no new information on the hamster situation since April and the 93 reported cases is the latest figure available at the CDC. "I haven't heard of any increased concern about it since our April bulletin," Alden said.

Hamsters purchased after April 1 should be clear of contamination, according to the CDC.

Schools' closing date may be changed—again

A proposal to shorten the present school year by yet another day and the possible awarding of a bid to repair heating and ventilation systems at two Dist. 59 schools will face the Elk Grove Township School board at its regular meeting tonight.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

The Dist. 59 administration has recommended the board change the last day of school for the 1973-74 year from Monday, June 17, to Friday, June 14. If approved, the school closing date would be changed for the third time this school year.

School originally was scheduled to end June 14. However, the board, at the suggestion of teachers, extended Christmas vacation two days to conserve energy in the form of heating. The two days were added to the school year, putting the closing date at June 18.

THE BOARD LATER authorized changing the closing date to June 17, since the district had used only two of three "snow days" to close down during bad winter weather.

According to Supt. James Ervitt, many in the district had complained that it was impractical to open up school Monday for such a short time. District students attend school for a little over an hour in the morning on the last day of school to pick up report cards.

Also on the board agenda are requests to award bids for milk, uniforms and mops for the coming school year along with carpeting for Devonshire, Hopkins, Rupley and Einstein schools plus a bid for the repair of heating systems and Byrd School in Elk Grove Village and John Jay School in Mount Prospect.

ONLY ONE COMPANY entered a bid for the project which is expected to improve not only heating, but ventilation in the schools during warm months of the year. Calls to bid were sent to five companies, said Adolph Danta, director of buildings and grounds for the district.

The bidder, Johnson Service Co., submitted a bid of $8,440 to do the work. Fluid Engineering Co., which did the original survey of the job and recommended possible solutions, is a subsidiary of Johnson Service Co. The board is expected to approve the bid.

Also on the agenda is a report on insurance for personal property in district school buildings. The district started to investigate possible personal property insurance following a complaint from a parent whose child's musical instrument was stolen from school. At the present time, the district carries no insurance which would cover the loss.

VFW auxiliary names chaplain, registrar

Mrs. Irvin L. McDougall, 433 S. Vail Ave., has been elected chaplain and appointed grave registrar of the 4th District of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary.

Mrs. Ben Munsinger will serve on the assistant color team, and Mrs. Joe Anzalone was appointed to work with the district president as historian. Mrs. Ed Doyle was named to serve as Loyalty Day chairman.

Poetry—an escape occupation of the base.

"WE HAVE STOPPED further distribution of the bumper stickers, anti-Army bill boards and newspaper ads because of the good faith we have in Berg," said Cawley, who was part of an Arlington Heights delegation that met with the assistant secretary on April 22.

"But we're frustrated by this latest example of Army indecision," Cawley said. The Arlington Heights Park District is still awaiting official title to another 52 acres of Nike base land formerly controlled by the U.S. Navy. However park officials have been given verbal assurance that the property, which has been declared excess to the military, will be conveyed to the district.

Park officials want to develop a golf course over the entire 140-acre military base.

Poetry can be as simple as expressing a thought, Rand Junior High School students have learned in a poetry unit at school. Brush away the lines and rhymes, poetry lets them think and write about their own experiences.

"Students should have the opportunity to express themselves," said Len Moisan, an eighth-grade language arts teacher at Rand. "They may have trouble expressing themselves in other areas. Poetry itself is not limited and doesn't have the bounds on it that formal writing does."

MOISAN AND another language arts teacher, Janet Ogran, are hoping to teach their students to use poetry as a means of self expression.

The local scene

Volunteer honored

Mrs. John Parker, 850 S. Vail, Arlington Heights, was recently honored for volunteering more than 250 hours of service to the surgical patient care unit at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago.

Mrs. Parker volunteers at least once a week at the medical center.

It's a mandatory course for eighth-graders and there are certain basics that must be learned. The rest of the curriculum is flexible. Students must complete several poetry activities, such as writing poems using figures of speech, writing a ballad using a popular tune or comparing things found outside with things in the classroom.

Moisan and Miss Ogran spent several hours working on a curriculum that will interest and involve the students. The least they wanted to do was to lecture to them. "I want to avoid turning kids off," Moisan said.

"If you're just lecturing, I feel that you don't reach all the students," Moisan said. By lecturing, he added, the teacher tells students just facts. "You don't have time to walk around and see how each student is doing," he said. "The needs vary. It's unfair to lecture to the class and take for granted that the kids will understand."

AN EIGHTH-GRADER, Kathi Olin, said she likes poetry better than reading and writing stories. "It's a better way to express yourself," she said.

Other students said they like thinking other people's thoughts and felt that poems were less tedious to read than stories.

"I can't write poetry, so I'd rather read poems than write," said Sharon Wheeler.

Moisan feels that it is important for the students to know the terms and concepts, but more important for them to apply what they've learned.

War, love, animals, nature and emptiness were some of the topics students wrote about. "These students are real people with real problems," Moisan said. "Their poems provide some insight and reveal a lot about themselves."

"I read some of the things and I got water-eyed," he said.

agendas for elimination of sex-stereotyping in the classroom" and resources and followup planning including review of materials available for teacher and student use.

Objectives set up by the group for the bookmobile include:

- To expose children to supplementary non-sexist materials and expand their concepts of role identity.
- To expose school staff to supplementary non-sexist materials and sources both for professional and personal growth.

Materials the group proposes including in the bookmobile are books, slides, films, audio-tapes and others "presenting people in positive fulfilling life roles."

THESE MATERIALS could more specifically include biographies of men and women, books portraying "non-traditional" careers for men and women, "more realistic fictional accounts of children and adults" and non-sexist games.

The school board has agreed to study the task force proposals and has directed the administration to do likewise.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said Friday no decision has been made on what action, if any, will be taken on the suggestions.

"It's too premature for me to say that's a way we want to go," Gill said. "But I think there's definitely room for inservice teacher training in those areas."
